One Big Fish
War Comes Closer
More Houses Needed
Would Not Eat Ladies

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

President Roosevelt, interrupting his journey to attend to official business, did a little fishing from a whale boat, off Port of Spain. It was poor fishing, but the President did not complain: he caught something worth while on Election Day. To catch 46 out of a possible 48 fish is good fishing.

Europe and Asia seem to be getting a little closer to war, although many wise ones think it still far off.

Germany admits willingness to side with Japan in a fight against Bolshevism. Practical Stalin, man of few words, tells Japan what he thinks of her pact with Germany by refusing to renew a treaty that permits Japan to fish in Russian waters off the coast of Eastern Siberia.

That fishing privilege is vitally important to the feeding of Japan's surplus millions. Increasing at the rate of one million new Japanese every year.

Perhaps Hitler and Japan have plans to get what they want from Russia, without Stalin's consent. England and France dealt with Germany in that fashion, after the first big war—now, they almost wish they had taken less.

During the big war, while Japan was helping herself in the East at Germany's expense, wisely content to "observe" the Europeans butchering each other, Germany's Kaiser warned the Mikado of fearful things that would be done to him at the end of the war.

Now that Kaiser, who would not let well enough alone, is a sad old white haired man, exiled in Holland, while a new young German rider, with a tiny black moustache makes a friendly treaty with the same Japan.

Langdon Post, commissioner of housing, tells the American Federation of Labor that a great national shortage of houses exists, because there has been no building. New York city, especially, is in a bad way, according to Mr. Post: there the shortage in housing "may have tragic consequences."

That is good news for the building trades, and temporarily good news for landlords; they will now overbuild, as usual, politicians will seize the opportunity to raise taxes and presently money lenders will be once more selling real estate under foreclosures.

Life is a brief game of seesaw —now UP that is prosperity, then DOWN that is depression. The budget is not the only thing that needs balancing.

Our neighbor, Nicaragua, well advanced in modern intelligence, establishes a military flying school, orders fighting planes from the United States, hires a first-class instructor. There is progress everywhere, and you realize it when you read in chapter 26 of Westermarck's "The Origin and Development of the Moral Ideas."

In ancient Nicaragua women were held unworthy to perform any duty in connection with the temples, and were immolated outside the temple ground of the large sanctuaries, and even their flesh was unclean food for the high priest, who accordingly ate only the flesh of males.

What a jump from a civilization in which the high priest would not eat ladies, to what has been achieved in a modern air school in which young Nicaragua women, once excluded from the temples, will be allowed to fly planes and learn how to release bombs.

Lord Beaverbrook arrived in New York on the Bremen in the morning, sailed again on the Bremen the same night, looked at his new American airplane, and told the world "war is improbable, because no nation wants to fight." The statement might have been more accurate had he said no nation except the nations of Mussolini, Hitler, Stalin, Kemal Pasha and the Japanese Mikado. Some of those actually crave war.

He might also have accepted this country. Uncle Sam does not want to fight, never does fight unless some power attacks or some acts at home forces war on him. Then he managed to take care of himself.

These questions that you may have asked, will be answered by time, perhaps one, perhaps two years' time.

Are we having inflation in America with the pouring out of extra dividends, bonuses, etc? Are we spending too suddenly and freely accumulated corporation surpluses of several years? What will happen when there are no more surpluses?

Are we going back into 1929 recklessness, just as hard times and bitter experience had begun to educate us? Or is the country now learning to use its financial resources as it has started using the hitherto wasted waters of the Colorado river?

Water accumulated in a lake or reservoir does little good un-

ORDER DUELING DOC TO FIGHT 6 IN DAY

'Me vs. 9' Gnaws Herring, Borrows $10, Plans Book

Budapest, Nov. 23 (AP)—The Budapest court of honor ordered an overnight postponement late today of the first of Dr. Franz Sarga's nine duels, on the ground the elaborate formalities were incomplete.

The court also held the first six of the nine encounters must take place tomorrow.

It ordered the delay after a daylong scurrying had failed to bring agreement among the 20 seconds involved. Several of the seconds who are members of parliament protested the pressure of business would interfere with their observing detailed etiquette of the rigid honor code before tomorrow.

At least one person, however, was all set to go. That was "Me Against Nine" Sarga, tax they call him now in Budapest, who donned a derby and Chesterfield and strode from his mosel flat to a gymnasium for a final dress rehearsal of two days' wholesome dueling.

A mile of a man, but bounding with energy, Dr. Franz was stopped every few yards en route to the gymnasium by duel-loving Hungarians. They told him to "be brave."

Tonight and tomorrow he had been scheduled to fight nine opponents in defense of the honor of his blonde wife and their unborn baby.

Wellesley Youth Dies in Garage

Carlton M. Smith, 20, son of Carl D. Smith, president of the Babson Statistical Institute in Wellesley, was found dead from monoxide today in the garage adjoining his home in Wellesley avenue, Wellesley.

The last seen of the youth was late last night when he went to the garage to hear a program on the automobile radio, his family told police.

Young Smith was born in Tonkawa, Okla., and moved to Wellesley with his parents in 1927. He was a student at Wellesley junior high school, later attending Mt. Hermon School at Northfield, and was graduated from Huntington School in Boston.

PAIR TAKEN BY SQUAD IN ROXBURY

Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney's denials that holdups of number pool headquarters and horse rooms had occurred in this city were virtually flung in his face today by his own detective bureau.

In spite of the commissioner's denials, detectives from police headquarters arrested two men on suspicion of being involved in the series of machine-gun robberies of illicit gambling places.

The pair were arrested in a house in Norfolk street, Roxbury, by a squad of four men led by Detective Sergeants James V. Crowley and Francis Russell.

WORE G-MAN BADGE

A report was immediately prepared for submission to the highest officials in the department, stating that the detectives had information the two men were connected with the holdup gang.

Crowley and Russell said they believed the pair were the actual leaders of the gang that had been preying on number pool operators, and that a friend, not yet apprehended, was the leader of an affiliated gang that has been raiding the horse rooms.

STRIKE HALTS U. S. HOUSING, SEWER JOBS

Union laborers at the Old Harbor federal housing project in South Boston walked out today, tied up construction completely, then forced cessation of a municipal street sewer program.

The walkout was in protest against use of Works Progress Administration employes on the sewer construction. The 50 relief workers thus employed departed as the union men quit their jobs.

Later a city truck with a new quota of 25 WPA men drew up to Hyde street and Old Colony boulevard. As the occupants clambered down about 30 union laborers stirred out across the street.

LIMB BACK IN TRUCK

There was no violence, nor any threatened verbally, but the WPA crew decided that the situation looked unpleasant, so they climbed right back into the truck and also departed.

Union Agent John T. Coakley, who called out the 314 hod carriers, carpenters' helpers, cement-mixers and picks-and-shovel laborers, said:

"We won't go back until every WPA worker is taken off the job, whether it's the sewers, streets or anywhere else."

He said that relief workers are getting only $12 to $15 a week, while the union laborers wage is 77½ cents an hour.

8 PLUMBERS STAND BY

A walkout of the union laborers forces the idleness of union bricklayers, carpenters, concrete and cement finishers, stone masons and engineers. Only eight plumbers who had small jobs to complete, stayed at their posts.

Andrew Ramsey, project engineer; Frank Creedon, federal inspector, and Andrew Cummings, general contractor, went into a conference, but Coakley was not invited. Before they did, however, it was pointed out that the relief men were engaged by the city of Boston.

Thus, said Cummings, whose firm hopes to complete construction of 1016 apartments, the union men have no dispute with him.

Foundation work on the huge federal project was finished by last August and the Cummings Company began the actual construction of the apartment houses about six weeks ago.

Since then the brick walls rose at the rate of about a story a week and between 600 and 700 workmen were kept busy.

The contract with the Cummings Company calls for completion of its part of the work by next August 5, or it must forfeit $250 a day for each subsequent day's delay.

Guests Near Blast In Lynn Plant

While 30 members of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce were making a tour of the Lynn Gas & Electric plant this afternoon, a blast rocked the water-gas manufacturing building next door to the office where the visitors were at the time.

No one was injured, but flames followed the explosion and the company fire department was mustered out to halt the menace of the fire reaching huge holders where thousands of cubic feet of gas was stored.

Two employes, Garry Wall and Michael Hines, fled the water-gas building as the explosion blew out every pane of glass in the place.

HIGH COURT UPHOLDS TAX FOR JOBLESS

Washington, Nov. 23 (INS)—In a historic decision which may forecast its attitude on the gigantic Federal social security program, the Supreme Court today, four to four, affirmed a decision of the New York Court of Appeals holding the New York State unemployment insurance law constitutional.

The decision, holding that the state has the right under the Federal Constitution to levy a payroll tax up to 3 per cent on employers to create an unemployment insurance system, affects 14 states with similar laws.

In addition to New York and the District of Columbia, the state affected by the decision are Alabama, California, Idaho, Indiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Hampshire Oregon, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas, Wisconsin and Utah.

The tie vote was the result of failure of Justice Harlan F. Stone, liberal member, who is suffering from a prolonged illness, to participate in the case.

DECISION ON TIE VOTE

Since a majority of the court is necessary to overturn the decision of the State court, the tie vote resulted in affirmance of the lower court's decision.

NAZIS-SOVIET NEAR BREAK OVER SABOTAGE CHARGES

PARDON SOUGHT FOR GERMAN ENGINEER

Moscow, Nov. 23 (INS)—Executive clemency was considered by the Soviet Government today in the case of E. I. Stickling, German engineer sentenced to death at Novosibirsk for sabotage, as reports Germany might sever diplomatic relations if the execution is carried out, reached Moscow.

While no official statement was forthcoming, it was regarded possible the government would commute the sentence and deport Stickling rather than precipitate a break in relations.

Declaring the charges against Stickling are "unfounded," Count Friedrich Von Der Schulenberg, the German ambassador, asked the Soviet foreign office to support his petition for clemency.

ARRESTED IN "PLOT"

Eight Russians were sentenced to death with him at Novosibirsk after they confessed to sabotage in mines, causing the suffocation of 16 miners.

STICKLING'S CONFESSION

At the close of Stickling's trial, he pointed to his confession in asking for mercy.

"I told the court all about my crimes against the state, concealing nothing," he was quoted as saying. "I said I had not started on the path of wrecking on my own initiative. I told who started me on it.

"I hope the court will take into consideration my full repentance and will soften my fate."

Other witnesses denied the mine sabotage to influence of the Gestapo, the German secret police, and to Leon Trotsky, the exiled old Bolshevik.

Feeling Runs High Throughout Germany

Berlin, Nov. 23 (INS)—The moment a Soviet firing squad carries out the death sentence imposed on E. I. Stickling, German citizen, at Novosibirsk, Germany's long-strained diplomatic relations will be broken off, it was believed today.

German feeling is running high, especially since it appears the same fate may be in store for 27 other Germans in Soviet jails on "espionage" charges.

Social Security Workers Preparing Employes' Registration Cards

These Security Plan Blanks—

Here's the Registration Card Employes Will Be Requested to Fill

Filled Out by Workers Here

Receiving Registration Cards at Social Security Headquarters

Social security headquarters at 470 Atlantic avenue was crowded today with employes seeking registration cards and information regarding the new law. Some were there for the purpose of concealing their correct age from employers, which is one of the worker's prerogatives in filling out the security cards. Others were there to get their cards filled out and "have it over with."

(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

AGE INSURANCE BLANKS SENT OVER STATE

Social security executives and postoffice workers here were feverishly busy today with their share of one of the greatest clerical and administrative tasks in the nation's history, the task of registering for old age insurance more than 26,000,000 employes of business and industry.

In the mail tonight, for distribution tomorrow, will be at least 1,250,000 blank forms to be filled out by Massachusetts wage earners.

These wage earners include, with certain minor exceptions, all persons on pay rolls, little or big.

The school boy or school girl working a few hours a week for spending money, will have to answer Uncle Sam's 15-item questionnaire, just as will the corporation officer, drawing an annual salary mounting into the tens of hundreds or thousands.

The registration blanks will go tomorrow to the weaver at his loom, the machinist at his bench, the stenographer at her typewriter, the bank president in his glass-walled sanctum.

Two-fold today was the responsibility of postal workers.

Here, as in every city and town of the United States, the postoffice was the clearing house for incoming forms, filled out by employers, and outgoing forms, to be filled out by employes.

The last of the huge flood of employers' forms was to have been returned Saturday night.

Social security executives, however, intimated they would show leniency to the tardy, realizing the unprecedented nature of the required cooperation.

Yet the forms to be distributed tomorrow to employes necessarily depended, in large part, upon information which only employers could furnish.

Wheels of the vast clerical machine were in motion, nevertheless, today, with Boston and Massachusetts cogs functioning efficiently.

Of assistance to the postoffice here were statistics collected in connection with state unemployment insurance and state old age assistance statutes.

Here, as elsewhere throughout the nation, there also began today an intensive campaign of public education, with printed placards of instruction and exhortation being placed conspicuously on view.

Only previous drives of similar magnitude were those undertaken in support of the military draft of 1917-1918 and the Liberty Loans of the war years.

Your Social Security registration blank, when you get it today or later this week, will have full and clear directions printed upon it.

Remember two things:

For your own sake, you should answer all the 15 questions truthfully.

To insure the information being kept a secret between yourself and Uncle Sam, you can put the filled-out form in the mail yourself or deliver it personally at the postoffice.

Social Security

90 Pct. Employers Return Blanks

Tardy to Get Leniency

In two days the government will start sending out employes' application blanks for account numbers under the social security act. Today the Boston Evening American tells you more facts about the act, and how it affects you, whether you are employer or employe.

Nearly 90 per cent of the employers in the Boston postal district who were issued registration blanks under the social security act have returned the blanks properly filled out. The deadline expired Saturday night at midnight.

Of those who failed to do so, many were confused by the exemption list, not knowing whether or not their businesses came under the provisions of the act, and a few failed simply because of negligence.

Although the law provides penalties for failure to comply with its provisions, the government is not at this time inclined to wield the club it holds over the heads of delinquents. In view of the fine co-operation shown thus far in the administration's attempt to set up the greatest piece of social administrative machinery the world has ever known, it has been decided to adopt a policy of leniency.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

However, belated registrations should be rushed in—but not to the local postoffice, as were those that were on time. Instead the late registrations should be sent to the national headquarters of the Social Security board in Baltimore.

Should you need an additional registration blank, this may be obtained from your local postmaster.

Meanwhile, it is understood that the Treasury Department has ruled on one knotty point in connection with the administration of the law. Many employers and branch office managers were confused about whether the central office or the branch offices of the firm should fill out registration blanks and make tax returns on branch office employes.

The department has ruled that while all branch offices must fill out the registration blanks, the returns must be filed by the central office with the nearest collector of internal revenue.

That is, any firm operating several offices will be treated as a single tax liable entity, and the headquarters office will be considered liable for all social security taxes due from the firm.

As to employes, they will soon begin to receive their account application blanks. Clerks and typists are busy in a branch office of the postal department at 470 Atlantic avenue sorting out, registering and checking off the employes' forms turned in during the past week before forwarding them to Baltimore. As this work goes on, the social security board is sending out blanks for the employes thus registered.

MUST BE FILLED OUT

Employes should remember that this card must be promptly filled out and returned via the postoffice people. The information given on it will enable the government to keep track of you wherever you may go, whatever you may do in the way of gainful work.

On the card the government asks you only for the information it will need to identify you, and to determine when you will be eligible to receive your pension. For you to receive a monthly old age income from the government, you will have to be 65 years of age, and will have to have earned at least $2000 as total wages for work done in five separate years between January 1, 1937, and the time you reach your sixty-fifth birthday.

The amount of your pension will depend on the total amount of money you earn between January 1 and the time you are 65. The maximum is $85 a month.

All account number applications must be in before December 5. There is nothing tricky about the application blanks, and you should have no difficulty filling yours out. The back of the blank contains detailed instructions. If you cannot understand them, your local postmaster will tell you what to do.

JUST YOUR BUSINESS

Employes who are unable to write are allowed to have someone else fill out the card for them, and then to sign with a mark, properly witnessed.

Give your correct age on your application blank and send it direct to the postoffice, or give it to your letter carrier, instead of handing the filled out card back to your employer to send in.

The arrangement with employers to handle the filled out blanks is merely as a convenience to employes. IT IS NOT COMPULSORY.

Tomorrow the Boston Evening American will tell you more about the social security act. If you have any problems of your own in regard to the act's effects upon you personally, write them in to the Social Security Editor of the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square.

More Queries Answered

Following are some of the questions Boston Evening American readers are asking about the Social Security Act. Perhaps you have such an individual problem of your own. If you have, please address it to the Social Security Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square.

Q—Will you kindly let me know how I stand in regard to the Social Security Act. I am a waitress working in a restaurant from 5 p. m. until midnight, receiving $5 a week. Kindly let me know what I will have to do.

A—Assuming that you get your meals in addition to your wages, you will pay a one per cent tax on your wages, plus a one per cent tax on the cash equivalent of the meals you receive. The cash equivalent of your meals will be credited to your pension, as well as your wages. Your employer will give you a Social Security application card, form SS-5, to fill out. Fill it out and return it to the postoffice, either through your employer or direct.

Q—I would like to know if I come under the act to get a pension. I am 78 years old, worked until I was 67 years old, and am not able to work any longer.

A—If you are in need and have no means of support, you can receive old age assistance, which is administered by the states under the national social security act. You should apply to your local Public Welfare office, and they will assign you an income sufficient to meet your needs.

TAXED FOR $3000

Q—Will you please answer this question in your column. If a man earns $60 a week and pays in 60 cents a week, what amount will he receive per month when he is 65? He is 38 now. Someone told me he would not receive anything because he earns $3120. Is that correct?

A—That is not correct. What he earns makes no difference, except that he is taxed for only $3000 a year, and only that amount is credited toward his pension. Thus he will pay in slightly less than 60 cents a week. The man, being 28 years old now, should have earned enough to entitle him to $65 a month by the time he is 65.

Q—I own and run a small business, in which I use one truck. The man I have hired to drive the truck for me also drives our family car at times. Is he eligible for a pension, and do I have to pay a tax on his wages? I understand private chauffeurs are not eligible. Can I consider him as a private chauffeur?

A—Since he drives the truck you use in your business, he is not a private chauffeur, and is eligible for a pension under the social security act. Consequently you must withhold one cent on the dollar of his wages, and match this with an equal amount yourself, when you make your social security tax returns.

Q—Please tell if I get a pension or not. I have a part time job in a clothing factory where I sew shirts. I work there afternoons. Mornings, I do housework for a woman who lives near where I live and has three children and works herself. Can I get a pension?

A—For purposes of the social security act, you have to consider that there are two of you—one, the girl who works at the factory, the other, the girl who works as a housemaid. The factory worker pays a tax on her wages, which are credited toward a pension. The housemaid pays no tax, receives no credits. In other words, as a factory worker, you come under the act, as a housemaid, you are exempt.

MUST EARN $2000 TOTAL

Q—I am 47 years old and am unable to work. Will I ever be able to get a pension?

A—If you are in need when you are 65 years old, you can apply for old age assistance, administered by the states under the national social security act. However, if in the years to come you are able to work, you can apply then for an account number, and your wages will then be credited toward a pension. You will have to earn $2000 between January 1, 1937, and your 65th birthday, and you will have to work at least one day in each of five separate years.

Welcome for Wife Too Hot; Beverly Fire Loss $1500

Thomas MacIntyre descended to the cellar of his Beverly cottage today and stoked the furnace with enthusiasm and, aye, many a heaping scoop-ful. For Mrs. MacIntyre was coming home from a long visit to bonny Scotland and he intended a warm welcome.

Then he placed a bunch of posies on the mantel and drove to Boston for his returning spouse, who arrived on the liner Samaria.

In the interim, the welcome-home fire far exceeded Thomas' expectations in warmth the fire department was called upon to control it.

Fire Chief John Cressy said the blackened and charred condition of the cottage which greeted Mrs. MacIntyre was due to an overheated furnace, and estimated damage at $1500. Neighbors made the MacIntyres welcome.

JOBLESS INSURANCE TAX UPHELD

There was no written opinion, and the attitude of each justice on the New York law was held secret.

A four-to-four decision on the high court is not unprecedented, but only on a few occasions in its 147 years' history has it thus acted in a momentous case.

Chief Justice Hughes' announcement created a sensation in the courtroom both because of its nature and because high court has not been expected to hand down important rulings today.

Justice Stone had been "counted in" the case during the argument on November 11 and 12, because of his liberal tendencies in the past court observers counted him to participate and cast the deciding vote in favor of the constitutionality of the law if necessary. No explanation was given for his failure to cast his vote.

SUBJECT TO REVIEW

The issue may be thrust before the high court again as a result of the equal division. Last year the Supreme Court upheld the lower court, 4 to 4, in a tax case in which Justice Roberts disqualified himself. Later, in another case involving substantially the same question, Justice Roberts was able to participate, and the former ruling was reversed, 5 to 4.

Should the completion of the court remain unchanged, however, it is regarded as likely that Justice Stone would vote to uphold unemployment insurance in some future case.

The New York law is one of many state unemployment insurance laws resulting from enactment of the federal social security program, which embraces unemployment insurance, federal old age benefits and pleas, benefits for dependent mothers and children.

Had the high court held unconstitutional the new law—a model for many other states—the present federal unemployment insurance tax would have been virtually nullified. The decision most, therefore, clear the way for enactment of unemployment insurance laws for every state in the union.

U. S. HOLDS FUNDS

Under the federal program the New York unemployment insurance system must be approved by the Social Security Board. The New York law also provides that the huge reserve fund set up under the law shall be deposited in the United States Treasury in trust.

The attack on the New York law in the Supreme Court was led by Frederick H. Wood of New York, who successfully overturned the National Recovery Administration and the Guffey Coal law. It was defended in oral argument by Solicitor Henry Epstein of New York State.

Laws of 3 N. E. States Similar to One Upheld

Three New England states—Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Rhode Island—have unemployment insurance laws similar to that of New York, whose statute was upheld as constitutional today.

The laws of these three states, like that of New York, were all taken from the same model statute.

The effect of the decision is apt to mean the Massachusetts law will also be declared valid in the suits which have been filed here attacking it as unconstitutional.

'Pig Food' Raid Bares Swindle In South End

Battling rats with clubs and iron pikes in a South End warehouse, health department inspectors today made a record seizure and smashed an alleged gigantic food-stuffs swindle.

Two men are being sought as the operators of a profitable trade in buying food unfit for human consumption and selling it to some South End restaurants.

According to Health Commissioner William R. Keeler, they purchased the food in the market district at low prices, saying they wanted it for pigs, and then passed it off on the restaurant owners as good food.

They had to tie their trousers legs and wade in among the rats, swinging clubs and pikes, before they drove the rodents to cover.

The inspectors then carried out 29,804 pounds of food in six truck loads. It was unfit for human use, Dr. Keeler said.

The raid culminated a week of investigation during which the two ringleaders, according to Dr. Keeler, evidently took alarm and fled.

Woonsocket's Old Bijou Fire Razed

Woonsocket, R. I., Nov. 23 (AP)—Fire of undetermined origin today destroyed the old Bijou theater, moving picture house which was a Methodist church 100 years ago.

A general alarm, bringing all available apparatus to the scene, was sounded.

Loss was estimated unofficially at $60,000. There were no patrons in the building, which had a seating capacity of 1000.

Thirty years ago the old church was remodeled and moved to its present site. It had been used by worshippers prior to that since 1853.

King, Queen Mary, Wally Meet At Informal Lunch in London

Walking To High British Station

Their Talk All About Flowers

By DAVID P. SENTNER

London, Nov. 23 (INS)—The most romantic couple in all the world today—King Edward VIII of England and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson—lunched together with Queen Mary at Marlborough House recently, it was learned today.

It was a friendly, informal gathering such as any mother might arrange for her son and the woman in whom he is most interested.

Mrs. Simpson arrived first at the relentless mansion where Queen Mary now lives and King Edward followed soon after. So far as is known, it was the first time King Edward and Mrs. Simpson had been together at Marlborough House although the former Baltimore matron had tea with Queen Mary on several previous occasions.

There was no mention of King Edward's marriage plans during the luncheon. The three talked of general topics and finally found a common interest in flowers—Queen Mary's greatest hobby.

In this connection, it was learned that King Edward's daily gift of flowers to Mrs. Simpson comes not from a West End florist, as frequently reported, but from the nursery of Windsor Castle.

There is an extensive nursery at Fort Belvedere, the King's own country home, but there is a beautiful informal garden which the monarch and Mrs. Simpson spend many happy hours in caring for plants and blooms.

The Princess Royal, who has been staying at Marlborough House most of the time, did not attend the luncheon. She is expected to oppose King Edward's marriage to Mrs. Simpson more than any other member of the royal family.

A friend of Mrs. Simpson declared today the first meeting between the attractive American woman and Queen Mary did not take place any during the state activities connected with the marriage of Prince Paul of Yugoslavia to the Duke of Kent. Edward then was Prince of Wales.

The luncheon was given at Buckingham palace, which Mrs. Simpson attended at King Edward's invitation. When the last royal guest had arrived and the party was at its height, Edward took Mrs. Simpson by the hand and presented her to his mother. Queen Mary received her most graciously. Afterward, the king remarked to friends:

"Well, that's that for the gossips."

King Dares Fog in Returning to Wally

Windsor, Nov. 23 (INS)—King Edward motored through a thick, white fog to Windsor Castle from his country retreat at Fort Belvedere where he and Mrs. Wallis Simpson and her aunt, Mrs. D. B. Merryman of Washington, were weekend guests.

The King spent several hours in his private apartment at the castle, then drove back to Belvedere to rejoin his guests.

King Edward went to Windsor Castle to see what progress is being made in extensive redecorations inside the big edifice.

The redecorating is under way in preparation for the King's elaborate plans to entertain extensively at Windsor next April and June.

WIZARD Of Railroads DIES

VAN SWERINGEN PASSES AT 57

Cleveland, Nov. 23 (AP)—O. P. Van Sweringen, 57, who with his brother, the late Manlius J., built a towering railroad empire out of a small real estate venture in Cleveland, died of a heart attack today aboard a Nickel Plate train en route to New York.

Death came to the famous financier about noon near Hoboken, N. J., in his private car.

Lives Quietly

Always retiring, Van Sweringen had lived quietly at his large estate outside Cleveland. He avoided the public, but appeared regularly at his offices in the Union Terminal which he and his brother built on Cleveland's public square.

At its peak, the railroad empire controlled by the two Van Sweringen brothers had 19,000 miles of track and assets of $3,000,000,000.

Resourceful in adversity as they were in their meteoric rise, the brothers recovered key securities in their properties at an unprecedented auction block sale by the house of Morgan, which had loaned billions to the Van Sweringens.

Blushes at Praise

Characteristic of his shyness, O. P. blushed as his friends congratulated him on the announcement Manila was unable to attend the sale because of illness.

The huge holdings of the brothers were frequently threatened, but they always managed to steer the right course.

Only last week two Van Sweringen-controlled railroads, the Chesapeake & Ohio and the Pere Marquette, declared stock dividends totalling more than $33,000,000.

Inseparable since the days when they were newsboys in Wooster, O., Otis P. was deeply affected by the death of his brother.

Col. Perkins, 71, Rail Chief, Dies

St. Louis, Nov. 23 (AP)—Colonel Albert T. Perkins, veteran transportation executive, died last night of pneumonia. He was 71 years old.

Born in Brownsville, Mo., Colonel Perkins was graduated from Harvard in 1887. He was a former president of the Society of American Military Engineers. From 1925 to 1931 he served as a member of the Harvard University board of overseers, the last year as its chairman.

Orphan Killed, 83 Escape in Fire

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 23 (AP)—A three-year-old orphan, Richard Nutter, died in a fire which destroyed an eight-room frame dwelling at the summer camp of Kappa Sigma Pi, charitable house for boys, today.

Eighty-three other boys, sleeping in a nearby wooden dormitory, escaped.

W. T. Wetmores Nearing Rift?

Often Travels Solo

MRS. JOAN WETMORE

Society Gossips Wonder About Her

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

New York, Nov. 23—More than a year ago the indefatigable Mayfair quidnuncs had the William T. Wetmores on the verge of parting—and then, apparently, Lili and the truly beauteous Joan Wetmore "kissed and made up."

They spent many months down at his orange plantation in northern Florida and everyone was very happy for them.

Now one hears rumors about the younger married sets that all is not as well as we thought in the Wetmore menage—and again one sees the lovely-looking Joan Wetmore about in society minus her husband.

GOSSIPS WONDER

Which has caused the gossips to wonder if this time there is a more serious rift in the Wetmore marital status.

There is no doubt that Joan Wetmore is one of the loveliest looking and most "stylish" young matrons in all Gotham—and though she was unknown in society before her marriage to "Bill" Wetmore, she has made a popular place for herself among the gayer "younger marrieds."

And when I saw her the other evening at the first Starlight Dinner Dance at the Waldorf-Astoria she was a choice au even—wearing a stunning black sequined gown—but she appeared to be a trifle sad and much thinner than usual.

HANDSOME COUPLE

Bill and the former Joan Deery make a very good-looking couple—and their marriage was the result of an enchanting trans-Atlantic ship romance.

Let's hope there's nothing to the rumors of a marital rift. There are much too many such partings among our popular "younger marrieds."

Michigan Quads Return to School

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 23 (AP)—The six-year-old Morlok quadruplets went back to school today, happy in their recovery from an illness.

Their mother, Mrs. Carl A. Morlok, said they were "entirely better" of the kidney ailment that had kept them out of school for three weeks.

WOODEN Ship---Iron MEN

SQUARE-RIGGER STRIKES IT RICH

New York, Nov. 23 (AP)—The handsome old square rigger "Joseph Conrad," one of the last of her gallant breed, struck it rich today, and settled down to a life of ease.

Alan Villiers, author, has sold the 485-ton steel veteran to Huntington Hartford, member of the wealthy Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, and in she becomes a private yacht.

She will undergo extensive alterations, have her face lifted, the signs of 54 years of battle with the seven seas removed, before she takes her place among the sailing elite.

Probably no vessel afloat has poked her slender bowsprit and clipper nose into stranger places than this stanuen 212-ton veteran of the days of wooden ships and iron men, when steam was something to sneer at.

Danish Ship

She was built in Copenhagen in 1882 and when Villiers found her in 1934 as he searched European harbors for a typical four-master she was serving as a Danish training ship.

Her name then was "Gedra Skage" and Villiers promptly changed that to "Joseph Conrad" in honor of the famous author of sea tales.

Her last two years have been adorned with excitement. Villiers took on a small crew and a party of 16 cadets, set out to sail her around the world.

A New Year's gale blew her on the reefs off Brazil. It was a month before she was repaired and sailed for Rio, across the South Atlantic and around the Cape of Good Hope.

She'll probably be sailing soon for a luxurious winter in Palm Beach. Her sale price was reported between $15,000 and $25,000.

Edward's Aides Battle Coronation Blunders

London, Nov. 23 (INS)—Court experts struggled against great odds today to prevent a major blunder from marring the coronation of King Edward VIII next May.

They fought against the odds simply on the basis of past performances; the history of British coronations indicates a first-rate hitch, sometimes grave, sometimes only humorous, is inevitable.

If Edward is crowned without a blunder the young monarch will have established still another precedent. So complicated is the ritual of the long, age-old ceremony that something has gone wrong with the coronation of every previous British ruler.

Those in charge of the ceremony hardly have to fear Edward will emulate his portly and perspiring ancestor, George IV, who felt the heat so badly that he took off all his clothes and refused to continue until he had cooled off.

SCRAP OVER SWORD

Neither do they have to worry that Edward will set the company laughing by winking at pretty peeresses, as did the painfully-bored George II.

Still they have their frets, realizing as they do perfection is well-nigh impossible at a ceremony in which hundreds of persons, many of whom are aged and infirm, have to take leading roles. The officials will be satisfied if the blunders at Edward's ceremonies are only minor ones.

The state ring made for Victoria, for instance, was so small that she started in agony when the Archbishop of Canterbury forced it onto her plump finger. After the ceremony the young queen spent an hour trying to ease it off.

The coronation of King Edward VII, grandfather of the present monarch, was almost ruined by the elderly, quavering Archbishop of Canterbury dropping the crown as he was about to place it on the royal head. Edward VII seized it just in time as it was about to drop on his pate.

King William and Queen Mary, having a joint coronation, had only one state sword to take to the altar of the abbey. Tall Mary and short William staged a public scrap to get possession of the sword.

KNOCKS CROWN OFF

When the gold basin for the royal chrism to be poured was produced, neither had any money. The situation was saved by the then Lord Danby, who stepped forward and carefully counted out 20 gold guineas in a loud voice and placed them in the basin with a pitying glance at the monarch.

Queen Anne was so ridden with gout and so overburdened with flesh that she was unable to walk to the coronation chair, and had to be carried.

Queen Elizabeth caused a sensation by complaining in a strident voice that the oil with which she was annointed was "grease, and smelled ill."

At the coronation of Henry I the Bishop of Salisbury, jealous of the Archbishop of Canterbury, suddenly pushed in front of him, and then jammed the crown on the King's head. Furious at the intrusion, the Archbishop picked up his crozier, knocked the crown off and smartly rapped the King on the head in doing so.

SCRAMBLE FOR GEM

The Archbishop of Canterbury at the coronation of King Stephen became so flurried that he dropped the holy water and forgot to kiss the King.

Richard I had his undershirt ripped open by an enthusiastic knight whose duty it was to open the royal coatlane for the anointing with oil.

Lord Galveston, in charge of the coronation of Edward II, snatched the crown from the hands of the Archbishop of Canterbury and himself perched it on the King's head. This ceremony was so long drawn out that many persons fainted of hunger.

Because the crown at the coronation of James II had not been altered it wobbled and was about to fall off when a chamberlain stepped forward and held it on its dangerous perch.

The German-born George I, newly arrived from Hanover, did not understand a word of the service, and after the Archbishop of Canterbury had vainly fumbled with his German, the remainder of the ceremony was from time to time translated into "hog Latin."

The main diamond in the crown of George III fell off and clattered onto the floor so that Monarch left the Abbey causing a rare scramble.

With such a background, next year's coronation can hardly be expected to come off without something going wrong. Obviously, no one knows just what it will be. All the officials can do is hope for the best and prepare for the worst.

BRITISH WARN SHIPS WILL BE GUARDED

London, Nov. 23 (AP) — Great Britain will protect its shipping on the high seas from either the Spanish government or the insurgents, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons in an emphatic pronouncement today.

At the same time he disclosed the government would introduce a bill to make illegal the carrying of arms to Spain from any country in British ships.

The measure will put teeth in strict regulations already in effect governing the export of arms from Great Britain. Almost since the start of the civil war arms shipments going to any country have required the approval of government departments including the Board of Trade and the Foreign office.

Britain Eden declared, is neutral in the Spanish conflict and intends to remain so.

The United Kingdom will not grant belligerent rights at sea to either side, he asserted.

Consequently, he added:

"His Majesty's ships will, should it prove necessary, protect British merchant ships on the high seas against interference of either party, engaged in the conflict in Spain outside the three-mile limit."

"At the same time," Eden continued, "it is not the intention of His Majesty's government that British shipping should carry war material from any foreign port to any port in Spain.

"In order to make this as effective as possible, the government intends to introduce legislation to immediately render the carriage of arms to Spain illegal, and I take this opportunity of warning all British shipping accordingly."

Replying to questions, the foreign secretary disclosed he was "not satisfied" with conditions surrounding the international neutrality arrangement, but asserted he had been informed within the last 24 hours that France was anxious that the "hands off Spain" committee continue to exist.

Germans, British Meet on Russ Split

London, Nov. 23 (AP)—Joachim Von Ribbentrop, German ambassador to Great Britain, conferred with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin for three-quarters of an hour at No. 10 Downing street today.

Reports circulated in diplomatic circles that Germany might be considering the possibility of breaking off diplomatic relations with Russia to give the Nazis a free hand in Spain.

The British authorities expressed keen interest in the reported threat of Spanish insurgent General Francisco Franco to blockade the port of Barcelona.

Informed quarters declared General Franco had not thus far answered a British query on prospective treatment of merchant vessels desiring to use the Spanish port.

Spanish Heir Admits He Plans to Wed Model

MARTA ROCAFORT COUNT COVADONGA

"Of Course I'm Going to Marry Aunt"

New York, Nov. 23—The much-whispered romance between Count Covadonga, son of the ex-King and Queen of Spain, and the dark-haired artist's model, Marta Rocafort, was given official standing today after a somewhat reluctant admission by the once royal—and still married—haemophilia victim.

Visibly worn by his months in the hospital, Count Covadonga told reporters gathered at his table in an exclusive night club that marriage to the model would follow his divorce, now pending, from the beautiful commoner for whom he renounced his "technical" right of succession to the Spanish throne.

"Please scram."

Miss Rocafort was more voluble and asserted:

"They all know I'm going to marry Count Covadonga."

The former Spanish prince was able to enter the club only by leaving heavily on two canes and with the assistance of friends. Among the party, his first since his illness, was his mother, the former Queen Victoria.

Although unable to dance, the Count beamed his full approval when the exotic model executed a rhumba with another member of the entourage.

Paris, Nov. 23 (INS)—Twenty Italian submarines and 50 Caproni bombing planes are in possession of Spanish rebels on the Balearic Island of Majorca, well-informed circles here stated today.

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

Copyright, 1936, International News Service

With the White Army in Madrid's Suburbs, Nov. 23—Spain's civil war has now become a conflict of the kind most dreaded by soldiers trained or untrained, namely, house-to-house fighting in a desperate struggle for possession of Madrid and today the White troops, supported by heavy shell-fire, shot and hand-grenaded their way into control of the model prison and Montana barracks.

From these two points broad avenues lead to the Puerta Del Sol, Madrid's 42nd and Broadway.

The Whites and Reds are still contesting the streets around the prison and the barracks, but both buildings are now isolated from the defending forces.

From the farthest advance posts down the streets of Madrid go corps of the Whites' finest shock troops.

They shoot for two hours or more into the ground floor of houses occupied by the enemy. Having cleared out the ground floor, the Whites rush the building and from the ground floor shoot upward through the ceiling into the floor above still held by the Reds.

They then storm one floor at a time until at the fifth floor they clear out the last remaining suicide soldiers of the Red militia, who have orders either to keep their positions or die.

They are told that if they abandon their posts they will be shot by the Red authorities.

6 Bombs Dropped By Rebel Airplanes

Madrid, Nov. 23 (AP)—Insurgent gunners resumed their cannonade today, crashing six shells into the heart of the Spanish capital. It was feared the bombardment caused many casualties and great property damage.

One of the shells fell near the Puerta Del Sol, Madrid's Times square, while others exploded in the nearby Plaza Del Carmen and Plaza De Bilbao.

Others, fearing a renewal of the air raid on the capital early today, threw themselves into the street gutters.

Lending gravity to the international aspect of the situation was the ministry of marine's announcement that "foreign" submarines torpedoed the cruiser Miguel de Cervantes at Cartagena yesterday.

The Cervantes, an announcement stated, was not damaged severely enough to keep it out of commission for rising. One torpedo, the communique added, passed under the bows of the cruiser Mendez Nunez.

In a front page spread, the Socialist newspaper El Socialista asked the international non-intervention committee:

"Do you need more evidence that the Fascist nations are becoming more open in their assistance to the insurgents?"

It then hinted at additional international repercussions with the statement:

"Fortunately, Spain is not alone in her fight for democracy. There are nations on this side which can lend it assistance in a thousand ways. This assistance lends us strength . . ."

Authorities said the Cervantes would be repaired in drydock.

It was announced 16 of Madrid's 200 firemen had been killed in bomb-set blazes.

Another development of the day was a flat denial by the communications ministry of the authenticity of a purported Russian broadcast that "if every plane Italy and Germany sent to earth, we shall send 1000." Circulation of the reported broadcast was blamed on "Fascist propagandists."

Harvard Graduate Gets Fellowship

Walter E. Trevett, at present connected with the housing division of the Federal Emergency Administration, has been awarded a $2500 traveling fellowship by the Harvard Graduate School of Architecture for travel and study in Europe, it was announced today.

Trevett was graduated from Harvard in 1927 and took his M. A. there three years later. The fellowship, named in memory of Arthur W. Wheelwright, was founded last year, so Trevett is the first winner of it.

EAST BOSTON FATAL BLAZE PROBE ASKED

Public investigation of the Boston fire department by the city council was demanded today by Councillor Henry Scivitella of East Boston, as a result of last night's fatal three-alarm fire.

The death of Leo Forti, 22, who leaped from a fourth floor window while firemen were driving to the scene from a station less than 100 yards away, proved the department was negligent, undermanned and under-equipped, according to Scivitella.

Fire Chief Samuel J. Pope, new head of the department, refusing to comment on Scivitella's charges, went ahead with an investigation of the fire.

Chief Pope, as well as police arson squad members and inspectors assigned by State Fire Marshal Stephen J. Garrity, are all inquiring into the cause of an explosion which flung the flames from basement to top floor in the twinkling of an eye.

Although the fire started in the lower part of the house, most damage was in the upper part. A can of liquid was taken from the premises, but whether it was inflammable or not has not yet been determined.

Forti's mother has not yet been told of her son's death. She believes he is lying injured in a hospital. Fears for her health are felt, when she is told, because her husband died only four months ago, and a son, Michael, 20, disappeared 10 days ago.

Scivitella said he would air his charges before the city council late this afternoon and he endeavored to have witnesses who would say Forti screamed for help "for five minutes."

Widow Plans Rites For Barnum, Death Plunge Victim

A heart-broken widow and a young honeymoon couple rushed back to Boston today to make funeral arrangements for H. Ware Barnum, 57, vice-president and general counsel for the Boston Elevated Railway, who plunged to his death from a sixth floor of the Park Square Building.

Mrs. Margaret H. Barnum, now his widow, had left two days ago to visit her daughter, Mrs. Charles Conklin, at Atlanta, Ga., to see her first grandchild.

Barnum's daughter, Pamela, was on her honeymoon with her husband, John Barger, Jr., at Hot Springs, Va.

Medical Examiner Timothy Leary rendered a verdict of suicide because of a stomach in the death of Barnum. He was a native of Danbury, Ct., and was a graduate of St. Lawrence University, Canton, N. Y., and Harvard University Law School.

Barnum had been under treatment for some months at a Framingham sanitarium for a nervous condition and had left the institution only a few hours before the death plunge.

According to officials at the sanitarium, Barnum appeared to be in fine spirits when he left and gave no indication that he intended taking his life.

Mute Is Defendant In Larceny Case

The alleged persuasive power of sign language featured a larceny case in municipal court today as the result of the arrest of a deaf and dumb man on a charge of mulcting a deaf and dumb woman.

Irving Simon, 42, of Wardman road, Roxbury, is said by police to have persuaded Mrs. Annie G. Joley of Water street, Quincy, to entrust the sum of $578 to him for investment.

Later, according to police, the woman signed over the home to Simon when told that she could not get welfare relief while owning property.

Court action, instigated by the woman's son, a law student, started when Mrs. Joley discovered that her home had been bought by her brother from a man "with a Beacon street office."

Simon is also charged with obtaining the signature of Mrs. Joley on the deed.

Herring Diet Preps 'Me Against 9' Duelist

In addition to his other problems, Dr. Sarga is broke and jobless. A 50-pengo (about $16) loan from a friend lightened his worries somewhat.

No money was forthcoming from Mrs. Sarga's grandfather, a bank official and multi-millionaire whose fortune she may inherit some day. Mrs. Sarga's family objected to the marriage.

Dr. Sarga, son of a civil servant, has said he hopes to write his memoirs after the duels and intimated their major theme would be the relations between the Sargas and Mrs. Sarga's grandparents.

SARGA ON EDGE

Grabbing a foil, he made a series of furious lunges at Fencing Master Santelli, who finally had to give way to the dashing midget.

Dr. Sarga said he probably would fight the duels in his horn-rimmed spectacles, which probably are the most repaired pair of glasses in Hungary. They have been shattered frequently in 17 previous duels.

FIRST DUEL TOUGHEST

The jugular veins of the contestants will be covered only with a light cloth about their necks. Sarga is the smallest of the duelists, but his hairy shoulders are the broadest of the ten.

Tonight's first duel will be the toughest, Dr. Sarga opined, and the two following it should be easy "because I'll be warmed up."

Budapest buzzed with speculation over whether Chief of Police Tibor Ferenczy would stop the duels. Generally, it thought not, because Chief Tibor loves the sound of clashing foils himself.

Under the duelists' code, Sarga must meet all his adversaries within 48 hours after his first combat with a heavy, military saber.

Dr. Sarga challenged nine men who intimated he married his beautiful wife for money and who expressed amazement he could woo and win her.

"I have been entreated to relinquish the idea of nine combats," Dr. Sarga said. "But I have never entertained any such plea because hotter, more priceless than life, is at stake—the honor of my wife and the baby we'll soon have.

POLICE MAY INTERFERE

"I would not want my child to learn his father was a coward."

How far the police would go to prevent the duels was not certain, officials sometimes wink at duels —which are illegal—but observers here said Dr. Sarga's challenges have aroused so much attention that authorities scarcely could plead ignorance of the plans.

As the hour approached for the first meeting—tentatively set for after nightfall at a secret rendezvous in a fencing academy—detectives lolled outside the Sarga home.

"I have some place in mind for the executioners if the others are too closely watched," declared Dr. Sarga, insistent on settling his issues despite his distraught wife's tears.

He refused to confide the location of the field of honor even to his seconds lest it become known to the police.

CHANCE FOR GOOD GATE

Numerous foreigners arrived in hope of seeing the duels, but only a limited number will witness the fights.

Besides the adversaries, there will be two seconds and a doctor for each. A neutral, known as the "leading second," will officiate, keeping the duellists from coming too close to each other and guarding against fouls.

Because the code dictates the insult can be wiped out only by blood, each duel must continue until one opponent is too exhausted to fight or is wounded.

The heavy cavalry sabers chosen as weapons usually are duller than the thinner blades of other swords. Hence they inflict tearing wounds which are harder to heal.

Mrs. Magda Sarga, the challengers' wife, spent a tearful night after she discovered her husband was only trying to shield her when he told her the duels had been cancelled.

The pretty blonde expectant mother wept and prayed her child would be a girl and not "inherit its father's military characteristics."

Dr. Sarga, who has spent recent days in improving his fencing skill under his wife's direction, expressed confidence in his sword-arm. He said there was no prospect for an amicable settlement.

LINEN THEFT SUSPECT HELD

Arrest of Matthew M. Wood, 45, of Woodard road, West Roxbury, as an alleged member of the $20,000 linen theft ring operating in Boston during the past several years, was announced today at Boston police headquarters.

Captain James T. Sheehan, of the Roxbury police, said "at least two more arrests' will be made shortly."

Wood was charged specifically with conspiracy in the larceny of $1101 worth of towels, aprons and linen on the complaint of the Federal National Linen Service of Columbia avenue, Roxbury.

In Roxbury District court Wood pleaded not guilty to the charge, had his case continued to December 2, and was released on his own recognizance by Judge Joseph Palmer.

Police have been attempting for several months to round up members of the gang, which has stolen $20,000 worth of linen from Boston supply houses.

ALASKA "SLIDE" KILLS FOUR

Juneau, Alaska, Nov. 23 (AP)—Four dead, seven injured and possibly 25 trapped were unconfirmed estimates today of a toll exacted by a huge landslide of mud and rock which fell with crushing force last night on Juneau's apartment house district.

Through disrupted communications came the reports of the dead and the estimates of Fire Chief V. W. Mulvihill that more than a score may have been killed or trapped by the 100-foot wide mass which rumbled down from a rain-swept mountain.

Muffled cries from the debris were heard as rescue workers toiled through the night. The slide demolished two apartment houses, a lodging house, a two-story concrete store, and several homes.

SHIP OFFICERS CALLED OUT IN STRIKE

Revived by the prospect of a nationwide walkout of unions of ship's officers, Boston's "outlaw" maritime strike threatened to assume serious proportions today.

First test of the strength of the revived strikers was expected at Charlestown where the unloading of the cargo of the Mobile City, the crew of which is on strike, was scheduled to be started.

Although strike leaders have appealed to their cohorts to refrain from any violence in their picket lines, they asserted that a heavy cordon of pickets would be thrown out today.

SYMPATHY STRIKE

Trouble of a serious nature loomed in the situation as strikers, who have been restrained all along from violence, were reported to be in an ugly mood and to have increased confidence as a result of the scheduled walkout of ship's officers.

Members of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association and of the Masters, Mates and Pilots Association were called on to walk out at noon today throughout the nation in sympathy with the West Coast marine strikers.

Another gain in the ranks of the strikers was reported here in the completion of negotiations with a committee representing the crew members of tugboats in Boston Harbor.

TOWBOATS, TOO

Jesse B. Thomas, chairman of the Boston strike committee, stated that the negotiations brought about an agreement whereby the towboat crews would obtain a union charter and join the strike.

"If this is successful," Thomas said, "we will tie up every boat in the harbor because they cannot leave without towboats."

Another indication that the strike, thought to be dying a slow death, was ready to assume more serious proportions was seen in the Eastern Steamship docks yesterday when the Saint John was scheduled to sail for New York at 5 p. m.

More than 250 pickets started a demonstration, which a police detail halted before serious trouble resulted. They permitted 20 pickets to remain on the promise they would not interfere with passengers and the vessel sailed on time.

TROUBLE IN NEW YORK

Five vessels were tied up by the strike in Boston harbor today when the crew of a sixth, the Coldharbor, which arrived yesterday, announced they would walk out today.

Trouble broke out in New York last night as the Eastern Steamship docks and ships were the first at strikers during a melee. Three men were arrested after the disturbance.

In San Francisco, the scheduled walkout of the ships' officers unions was hailed joyfully by strikers.

Meanwhile in the west coast city, Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady was pressing his efforts to settle the marine troubles and the various minor conflicts which it has brought about.

Plans were discussed with Col. C. F. Olson regarding the shipment of food by truck to Alaska, and with federal agencies on the Hawaii trouble.

MAYOR ASKS 4 POLICE BOATS

Purchase of four new patrol boats at a cost of $75,000 for the Boston police department was recommended to the City Council today by Mayor Mansfield.

Funds for the purchase would come for the sale of public lands.

Included in his plans for strengthening of the harbor police are a $45,000 60-foot patrol boat, capable of making 20 knots an hour; also two 28-foot boats, costing $10,000 each, and a 25-foot open-pit motorboat, costing $5000.

Two new radio equipment for the boats would cost $3000 additional.

Trail of Chickens Leads to Millis Jail

A trail of blood spots from newly-killed chickens led to the arrest today of Michael Sauer, 47, of Acorn street, Millis, who later was sentenced to six months in House of Correction by Judge George James in Franklin district court on a charge of larceny of four chickens and 25 gallons of oil from Morris Cohen.

State Trooper John C. Blake, Jr., trailed the spots from the Cohen farm in Millis to the home of Sauer. He also reported he found feathers near an oil barrel and checked them with those of Sauer.

Mother of Slain Girl Passes Away

Saratoga, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP)—Mrs. Mary L. Selzer, 68, mother of the mysteriously-murdered Christina Mary Jurstler, died here last night.

Members of the family did not disclose whether Mrs. Selzer ever learned how her 21-year-old daughter died. At the time of the murder the mother was so ill that the family told her only that Miss Jurstler had been killed by an automobile.

The daughter, an expectant mother, was found dead last month in an Indian reservation.

Dorchester Girl Missing 2 Days

An extensive search was under-was today for 20-year-old Alice Lounsbury of Charles street, Dorchester, who has been missing from her home since Saturday morning.

Seize 2 as Ringleaders Of Gambler Raids Here

a correctional institution, and at the same time the suspected leader of the race-room raiding gang was released from the same institution, it was said.

MARKED FOR DEATH

The week-end activities of the holdup gang brought them to official police notice, for robberies occurred in Brockton and Malden, where police immediately took official cognizance of what had occurred.

"No such holdup reported" has been the official attitude of the Boston police in the long series of daily holdups into which machine-gun guns were introduced last week.

The man who is supplying the holdup gangs with information on the number pool parlors and race rooms is said to be a former number pool operator.

It is understood to have been marked for death, despite the declassification of organized gambling which has halt the depredations by bloodshed.

GANGSTER "FINGER MAN"

This "finger man" is said to be a gangster trusted implicitly in the past in gambling circles.

Realization that such a "finger man" existed came to the local racketeers over the week-end as they met to discuss the activities of the past week which reached into Brockton Saturday night, a betting parlor controlled by a local racketeer, and into Malden yesterday.

The raids have been carried out with such perfection, the local gamblers decided at their meeting, that only such accurate information could be garnered from one who was "in" on the activities of the various gambling establishments.

While the racketeers here became more and more worried over the situation which appears to be endless, they took a solemn oath, it was learned, not to engage in any gunfire with these machine gunners.

The Boston Evening American was informed that over the week-end four of the gunmen, armed with machine guns, went to Lawrence and held up one of the "Big Four"—men who control the rackets in the city.

They told him, it was learned, either to get $1000 "in a hurry" or there would be plenty of shooting "all over the place."

They got the money, no chase was made because of fear, and no report, as usual, was made to police.

This same fear that these gunmen will start shooting at the least opportunity has kept the Boston racketeers from starting any gunplay.

HAD INFORMATION

In Malden yesterday morning at 8 o'clock, 20 men were lined up against a wall in a Center street gambling house not far from police headquarters by three masked and armed men who made a getaway with $1000 in cash and jewelry.

Although no report was made to Malden police, these gangsters believed without a doubt to be the same mob—worked with the finesse of professionals and had evidently advance knowledge of the place and how to gain entrance.

In the South End several gambling places have closed their doors for the time being at least, as great fear has reign of terror affected their owners.

Closing of these places was believed to be a precaution to prevent any possible killings that might result in a city-wide gangster massacre.

The attitude of the raiding gangsters is defiant and insulting—holding no fear of police and knowing where to go and what they want when they get there.

RACE ROOMS CLOSED

A race room in Everett, another in Chelsea and a third in Medford were closed today and the handbook men working for these places did not make their usual rounds to take bets.

In all three cities police were ready with riot guns in radio cars to dash after the holdup gang if they appeared.

A definite link was found between the Malden robbers and the gang that raided the Brockton race room Saturday evening when one man was slugged. According to one of those in the Malden place the gang leader said:

"Let's be quiet about this; we hurt one man tonight and don't want to hurt any more."

Needy Will Get Seized Turkeys

Oxford, Nov. 23—The welfare department here is caring for 15 live turkeys and 3 live roosters, confiscated by State police in a raid on a local farm during an alleged turkey raffle. They will be given to needy families after the case is disposed of in Webster district court on December 4.

During the raid John B. Young of Main street, Worcester, was arrested on a charge of promoting a lottery and 21 persons were arrested for being present.

SEATTLE MAYOR DEFIES OUSTER ATTEMPTS

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 23 (INS)—Mayor John F. Dore, of Seattle, who has been under fire from many quarters for his radical public statements, has roared defiance at any contemplated attempts to recall him.

Although no formal move has been made to put the city's fire-eating chief executive out of office, Mayor Dore dared anyone to make such an attempt "before I'm good and ready to get out."

The mayor's defiance was voiced at a meeting of the newly organized women's league for labor which drew several hundred women to a downtown auditorium.

APPROVES STRIKES

Dore expressed his approval of each of the numerous strikes which are in progress in Seattle at present and which have brought Seattle nation-wide notoriety for its continual labor strife.

Among those to whom the mayor pledged his support "with everything I can do" were the "sit down" workers' alliance strikers, a group of transient unemployed men who are conducting a strike against the federal relief organization here, Dore said he could not understand why his "friend, Harry Hopkins," federal relief administrator, had issued the order which cut these men from federal aid.

"If Harry Hopkins dared to say what he thinks, even Roosevelt, liberal as he is, would be forced to let him go," Dore asserted.

CALLS POLICE "COSSACKS"

Referring to the Washington state police as "Cossacks," the mayor predicted the "liberals" of the next session of the State Legislature would abolish the police.

Radicals in Seattle have subjected Governor Clarence D. Martin to bitter attack because the state police interfered in a riot around a lumber mill at McCleary, Wash., where a labor feud is in progress.

"Nobody dares to use our city police for strike breaking," Dore shouted.

SWING DEATH GRAND FINALE DUE TODAY

Los Angeles, Nov. 23 (INS)—The weird Reid Russell death mystery will be the showdown stage today, with its internationally famous principals gathering for a final questioning while authorities await reports from laboratories checking blood stains, bullet holes and a rusty-barreled 32-caliber pistol.

Investigators were reported veering back to the original theory, that the 28-year-old automobile salesman blew out his brains because he was in desperate financial straits.

Gouverneur Morris, famous novelist, told authorities that Russell threatened to "do it all" some days before his body was found in a garden swing, an automatic pistol clutched in his right hand.

Morris' attractive wife, Ruth, corroborated that statement and so did beautiful Lila Lee, the firm actress and her 12-year-old son, Jimmy Kirkwood, guests at the Morris home last Sept. 25, when the body was found. All were to be requestioned today.

Revelation that Russell had extremely pressing financial obligations featured the investigation during the week-end as several promising leads pointing toward the murder theory, blew up.

In writing off the case as suicide the coroner said the large amount of blood on the pillow indicated Russell had died in the swing, and not elsewhere. The murder theory was based on the possibility that Russell was placed on the swing after he died.

A. F. OF L. REBEL BATTLE OPENS AT TAMPA

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 23 (INS)—The American Federation of Labor formally voted today to open its epochal battle over the 10 suspended rebel unions of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The decision was made on the motion of Matthew Woll of the Photo-Engravers', chairman of the resolutions committee, which will recommend action of the industrial union rebellion dispute.

When this was done, the delegates prepared for a lengthy and bitter session, which may run on into the night.

MINORITY FIGHTS MOVE

A minority group, fighting or reinstatement of the 10 suspended unions, will oppose this procedure, but if A. F. of L. old guard leaders insist, they have the votes to carry out this plan.

An air of tenseness pervaded the convention as decks were cleared for consideration of the CIO question.

These unions were suspended from A. F. of L. membership in September by the federation executive council, after they joined Lewis and his United Mine Workers in a defiant drive to organize the steel industry along mass of industrial lines.

A careful check-up of sentiment among delegates revealed that only one thought dominated the majority—indefinite suspension, with the executive council empowered to meet or initiate any new peace negotiations which opportunity presents.

UNION DIVISION SEEN

Come what may, impartial observers saw only a complete division within the trade union movement in this country as the outcome.

When this convention comes to a close, the committee for industrial organization, headed by sturdy and bushy-browed John Lewis of the United Mine Workers, and the A. F. of L. will be to all intents and purposes, two completely separate entities.

This, despite President Charles Howard, of the International Typographical Union, here for the last days of labor's annual congress and an "observer," promised to pull his 100,000 strong membership away from the Federation if such an eventuality comes to pass.

"If the executive council persists in its attitude, I'll do my best to take my union out of the A. F. of L.," said Howard.

Howard is himself a CIO official, but his union has never formally joined the rebels, and was suspended along with them. The more than 700 votes of the I. T. U. are here, and will be cast for reinstatement of CIO unions.

A. F. of L. Maps War On Detective Agencies

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 23 (INS)—The American Federation of Labor is preparing, and will urge every state legislature to adopt legislation outlawing professional strike-breaking organizations, most of them masquerading as "detective agencies."

This was announced today by the federation's president, William Green, as the A. F. of L. convention whooped through a resolution supporting its legislature committee's denunciation of these agencies and calling on friends of labor to see that the special senate investigations of labor spy activities be continued.

Returning Priest Finds Father Dead

A Thanksgiving Day reunion with his family, for which he had travelled 40 years from British South Africa, turned into a sad homecoming today for Rev. Fr. Francis J. Fitzgerald when he learned on his arrival in New York that his father, John T. Fitzgerald of 131 St. Alphonsus street, Roxbury, had died November 6.

Relatives had tried to send news of death to Fr. Fitzgerald while he was en route, but it was not until he stepped off the ship in New York that he learned of his father's demise.

Father Fitzgerald has been a missionary in British Africa ever since his ordination 12 years ago. His father for many years was a watchman at the Boston Globe.

Henry in Santason Parade

(Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

Well, look who's here! Henry and his stooge. Henry is going to be one of the feature floats of the eighth annual Santason parade that you may see on Thanksgiving Day morning on the streets of Boston. Watch the American for the route of parade. Of course, you already know that Henry is also one of the features of the comic pages of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

SANTASON DUE HERE THURSDAY IN PLANE

Esquimaxland, Nov. 23—Santason will arrive in Boston on Thursday at 11 a. m.

He took off by plane from here early today. His plane will make a stop at Edmonton, Alberta, to refuel and check his plane.

From Edmonton he will fly to Detroit, Mich., and thence to Boston. This is Santason's eighth trip to Boston.

Santason is using a plane equipped with the latest and most scientific flying instruments. The ship has a two-way television radio set.

Prior to his take-off, an impromptu christening of the ship took place. It was named "The Spirit of the North." Mrs. Santa Claus assisted at the game.

Santason in the past made the trip alone. But this year he has a crew of three, co-pilot, navigator and radio operator.

Santason's 1936 welcome to Boston will be the greatest ever. Jordan Marsh Company, sponsors of Santason, are forming elaborate plans for the occasion, including a gigantic parade.

The parade will surpass all others in color, splendor, slapstick, gayety and size. It will be novel.

William E. Reed, Importer, Dies

William E. Reed, New York importer, and for many years associated with the Boston house of Jacob Dreyfus & Sons, and head of the firm bearing his name in the Fifth Avenue home following a heart attack. He was 56 years of age.

Until his retirement a year ago because of failing health Reed had been a member of the firm of Hilborn & Reed, importers of silk and woolen hose and sweaters.

His widow, the former Miss Clara L. Hamnett, of Chicago, and two daughters by an earlier marriage, Mrs. Hoe Dew, of Wiscasset, Me., and Mrs. Harold Germaine, of Rutland, Vt., survive.

Funeral services will be held in New York Wednesday at the Campbell chapel on Broadway. Burial will be in Fernclift cemetery, Westchester.

EDITH MAXWELL FIGHTS TRIAL

Wise, Va., Nov. 23—Hatred of hill people here for a neighbor's daughter who tried to better herself with "book learning" and "civilized" ways makes impossible a fair trial in this county for 22-year-old Edith Maxwell, charged with the "slipper" murder of her father, her counsel planned to tell Circuit Court Judge Vera T. Carter today.

They will seek a change of venue, permitting Miss Maxwell's new trial to be held elsewhere than in Wise courthouse, where a stony faced mountain jury found her guilty once and saw her sentenced to 25 years in the state penitentiary.

Other witnesses, who have undertaken the accused girl's defense, were to present today 10 affidavits from Wise county residents all expressing the opinion that an impartial jury cannot be obtained here.

BRICKELS HONORED

500 Attend 25th Wedding Fete

More than 500 persons turned out to honor Charles Brickel and his wife, at 507 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, in celebration of their 25th wedding anniversary at the Temple Mishkan Tefila, Seaver street, Roxbury.

Highlight of the evening was a silver wedding Huppah, traditional Hebrew wedding ceremony, while all those present took part in the many ancient Jewish folk songs and dances typical of 17th century life in Ukrania, the birthplace of Mrs. Brickel's parents.

Last February 8 parents of Mr. Brickel celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at the Temple Mishkan Tefila, Seaver street, Roxbury.

He helped many a boy earn his way through school to aid his family. He is noted for his many acts of a philanthropic nature.

Among those who attended were Carl Dreyfus, publisher of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser; John A. Mahoney, managing editor of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser; Lloyd Thaxter, associate of the Herald-Traveler; Jack Conway, sports editor, Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser; Jack Kenney, circulation manager of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser; T. # 3800 WORKERS ON CITY JOBS FACE LAYOFF

Three thousand eight hundred workers on Boston street projects face a layoff after December 1, it was disclosed today following a conference between Mayor Mansfield and city department heads.

Urging that all measures be taken to provide them with work during the winter, the mayor asked the officials to submit plans for new projects to replace street surfacing until it is resumed in the spring.

Present at the conference with the mayor were: Colonel Thomas F. Sullivan, Boston director of the Works Progress Administration; Owen A. Gallagher, chairman of the street commission; Public Works Commissioner Christopher J. Carven; City Auditor Charles J. Fox; Budget Commissioner Francis J. Murray, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph P. Brennan.

Among proposals discussed to find work for the 3800 workers—most of them on the WPA—were street excavation, grading, sewer and water extension projects.

In spring the 3500 workers, whatever their status during the winter, will return to the street surfacing projects.

Cheer Townsend's Dictator Retort

Cleveland, Nov. 23 (AP)—A deposition hearing in a suit against Dr. Francis E. Townsend and Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd., ended today with 200 courtroom spectators cheering the aged physician and booing counsel for Dr. Alfred J. Wright, ousted director of the movement, who brought the action.

A deputy sheriff returned Dr. Townsend to the initial session of the hearing in July, overtaking the pension leader as he reached the city limits bound for Erie, Pa., by automobile.

H. F. Sashrow, Wright's attorney, ended the hearing with two questions, both greeted by boohs from the crowd. They were:

"Doctor, this movement is a racket, isn't it?"

"You are the Fascist dictator of this movement, aren't you?"

FISHBONE THWARTS REVENGER

(A Short Story)

"Fried fish? Yessir."

Big Jim Donelly whistled softly to himself as he moved wearily toward the tiny kitchen at the end of the "Blue Moon" Diner.

The newcomer, a sun-burned individual in a purple sweater, smirked hideously as he watched Jim disappear.

Well, Big Jim hadn't recognized him. All the better! Revenge would be so much sweeter when he revealed his identity!

The eyes of the man in the purple sweater glittered as he threw a general glance of appraisal about the diner. Just as he expected. A swell looking place—built with some of his money. Big Jim had certainly made good use of the $10,000 which he had swindled out of him and then railroaded him for a 22-year vacation to the big house.

The man's face hardened as he watched Jim reappear. Twenty-two years was a long time. No doubt Big Jim thought him stone dead.

"Pretty cool day," Big Jim observed, noisily laying down the dishes. The other grunted. He was too busy watching the only other occupant of the diner —an old man at the end of the bench—and estimating how long it would be before he left.

Hour after hour Big Jim thought as he glanced at the clock. Eleven. He wheeled about-face as he started to undo his apron.

"Nope, he's all gone," the old man said with an odd expression on his face. "Choked to death on this small fishbone."

Plymouth Rock Awes Midnight Visitors

CAT AND MOON BEWITCH

Midnight had just struck! Twelve long, measured strokes of the old Plymouth church-bell! Standing on the ledge overlooking time-honored Plymouth Rock, where once the brave Pilgrims landed, a party of modern Pilgrims," including myself, stood and stared down at the imposing spectacle, like persons hypnotized, trance-bound.

The Rock bore the impressive figures carved into its surface: "1620"—the year the Pilgrims first set foot on our soil. Freedom to worship God in their own way, they sought —and won!

The full face of the moon shone down on us as we stood there viewing that most ancient of ancients in New England. How weird, how uncanny, how altogether mysterious it seemed! How awe-inspiring!

Then, to cap the climax —to lend an even more weird touch to the already haunted atmosphere — a huge black cat suddenly appeared from nowhere and rubbed against my leg, purring softly and contrastingly. As we had fresh fish (caught that day at Plymouth) in the car, no doubt that was what had drawn friend cat—so, throwing pussy a goodly portion of the sea-food, we lost no time in clambering back into the machine, en route home!

The last we saw of Plymouth Rock was its shadow, as it lay outlined by the moon, and a huge black cat docilely eating fish in the same bizarre historic shadow!

Midnight had passed—but that magical, amazing view of Plymouth Rock by the rays of a full moon shall EVER remain; And the presence of the huge feline from—WHERE!—eagerly devouring fish from those same waters traversed by the band of Pilgrims so many, many years ago!

Miniature Ocean, Sea Wall at Tech

MODEL AIDS ENGINEERS

Residents of Massachusetts, with its long coast line, are all too aware of the havoc the battering seas of the Atlantic can wreak on ocean front communities. Such localities may take heart in the news that the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is experimenting with sea wall construction in order to evolve a protection to check the ravages of mid-winter northeasters.

Professor Kenneth Reynolds is in charge of this research. Professor Reynolds conducts his experiments through the use of a miniature ocean and model sea walls at the Institute's river laboratory. The miniature ocean is 20 feet 2 inches long and 8 feet wide and is complete with a sandy beach at one end and a wave machine to generate waves of adjusted force at the other.

The waves of the little ocean roll from the far end to break on the beach and hurl themselves at the model sea wall. The sand, water and pebbles carried over the wall are collected in a galvanized tin box and are measured to determine the strength of the wall. Models of actual sea walls, such as the Winthrop Beach wall, are used in the experiments.

This unique miniature ocean enables the Tech engineers to study in detail the effect of waves on sea walls and make valuable observations which would be impossible under actual conditions.

Still he may reach his heart's desire,

Mad Mixups IN THE Mountains

Jared Stoll, who lived in the Kentucky mountains, loved bookworms. He advanced rapidly and was made a schoolmaster. He taught Minty Ann Tipps, who had no time for school, a little spelling. Minta was the fatally dredgie, while her sister Poppet, pet, spoiled, beautiful (and she knew it) went to school and learned nothing.

Ben, Jared's friend, wanted many Poppet.

Poppet, eager to get away from the mountains, knew that Jared was planning to go to college in the big city and used her beauty to wind him into marriage. Minty, who secretly loved Jared, married a widower, much older than herself to take care of his children for him.

One night Poppet was very angry. She was restless. She went to Jared with a letter from Ben under an assumed name, wrote to him. She received an answer, and on that same night disappeared.

ELEGY

I've noticed when a fellow dies, no matter what he's been,
A saintly chap or one whose life was darkly steeped in sin,
His friends forget the bitter words they spoke but yesterday,
And now they find a multitude of pretty things to say.

I fancy when I go to rest someone will bring to light
Some kindly words or goodly acts long buried out of sight;
But if it's all the same to you, just give to me instead
The bouquets when I'm living, and the knocking when I am dead.

EIGHT WEEKEND AUTO DEATHS; TWO HERE

Week-end auto accidents had taken a toll of eight New England lives today.

Death took the wheel to score two of these fatalities in Greater Boston, bringing the list of those killed here in 1936 to a total of 208.

Of five slain on Massachusetts highways, two were victims of hit-and-run drivers.

AUTOS HAVE KILLED 208 IN GREATER BOSTON THIS YEAR

STRUCK CROSSING STREET

In Boston, Martin Connolly, 62, of Centre street, Roxbury, was fatally injured by a car which struck him as he was crossing Massachusetts avenue at Commonwealth avenue. He died today at City hospital.

Marcus Ripley, 72, of Charm avenue, Roslindale, was killed when he was struck by an automobile on Hyde Park avenue, Hyde Park.

Frank Selinskie, 30, of 1 street, South Boston, was fatally injured at Whitman by a hit-and-run auto occupied by a group of singing passengers.

HIT-RUN DRIVER

At South Hadley Falls, a hit-and-run driver killed 16-year-old George Waldo, as the youth was walking home from church. The body was found where it had apparently been carried to the side of the road and propped up in an upright position.

A. Pawunket, R. I., pedestrian, Mrs. Sarah A. Cooney, was fatally injured by a car driven by a 23-year-old man. He was arrested.

A Salem, N. H., man, past the life of Donald C. Cleveland, Providence, R. I., inspector for the alcohol tax unit of the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau. His car left the highway and hit a tree, a mile of which almost tore him in two.

At Dexter, Me., James "Jerry" Wilson, 53, a lobsterman was killed on the state highway between Dexter and Lubec when a car skidded on an icy curve.

In a blinding snowstorm at New Gloucester, Me., 20 miles from Portland, James F. Kelley, 18, a former Lewiston high school athlete, was instantly killed when his car skidded out of control and overturned. Two other persons were injured.

Daniel H. Harris, 39, of Hampshire street, Auburn, Me., and Miss Esther Leaman, 30, at Wellman street, Lewiston, were taken to Central Maine General hospital, Lewiston, suffering from bruises, lacerations and shock.

Dillinger's Last Moments on Earth, Snarling Gun Drawn, Told by G-Man

Morbid Seek to Buy Blood-Stained Souvenirs

By MELVIN PURVIS

CHAPTER XXXVII

About twenty-five minutes passed before the special agents and the men from the East Chicago, Indiana, police department arrived. They seemed an almost interminable length of time; I became extremely nervous.

I chatted with the ticket seller who apparently suspected nothing. Finally, out of the corner of my eye I saw one of our men taking his place, then another, and another.

I visited several of them and informed them that the motion picture, Manhattan Melodrama, would last two hours and four minutes. Each was informed of the exact moment when Dillinger had entered the theater and of the exact moment when he would come out. If I stayed for the entire show.

Melvin Purvis

Two of the East Chicago, Indiana, policemen were stationed on the north side of the theater, two Special Agents and myself on the south side. These five were the men selected to close in on Dillinger when he came out.

Every man was instructed to keep his eyes glued on me. I was to light a cigar when I had positively identified Dillinger. The lighting of a cigar was intended as a signal of identification only, a wave of the hand was then to follow as a signal to close in and capture him.

There was no doubt in my mind whether Dillinger would stay for the complete show. Gangsters frequently visit the theater night after night and remain for hours, leaving before the showing of the next picture is started. Our vigilance could not be relaxed for even a split second.

I bit off the end of the cigar and nervously chewed on it for more than an hour. I was afraid to leave my post for a drink of water and my throat was parched from the tension, from fright, and from nervousness.

My knees wouldn't stay still. I knew that Dillinger was in this theater and I knew that we could not let him escape this time. We would never have another opportunity like this.

Noticed by Staff

We were doing everything possible to avoid attention and were careful to see that our movements would not arouse suspicion on the part of the persons in the neighborhood or the theater management, staff. But despite our efforts to appear to be just bathers or loiterers and yet hold our positions properly, the theater's employees noticed us and feared that a hold-up of the theater's box office might be planned.

The manager called the police. They came, on the side of their automobile appeared the words, Chicago Police Department. A Special Agent immediately told them of our identity and asked them to remove the car from the vicinity.

This had no sooner been done when all of a sudden a crowd began leaving the theater. I stood with my cigar clamped in my mouth, a match torn out of a little paper holder of matches ready to light it.

G-Men Close In

John Dillinger came out, on one side was Anna Sage and on the other, Polly Hamilton. A vertible cordon of women and children seemed to surround him.

I watched him as he moved slowly forward. He looked into my eyes, surely he must have seen something more than casual interest in them but apparently he didn't recognize me and I struck the wind and lit my cigar. Any man knew that Dillinger had been identified.

I waited for what seemed an endless length of time, hoping against hope that the crowd would disperse and partially clear the field.

At last, the crowd around him dwindled to as small a number as we could hope for and I gave the signal to close in.

I looked up the street toward the two East Chicago, Indiana police and they had seen the same signal. They were talking to a pedestrian, and I took a few steps to the middle of the sidewalk and repeated the signal. They still did not see it. My heart pounded, a slip might mean failure.

With extreme relief I saw two Special Agents, who had not been assigned to the part of the theater, were to close in, coming to our assistance. The other two Special Agents came into view on the opposite side. Dillinger was surrounded.

I was about three feet to the left and a little in the rear of him. I was very nervous; it must have been one of those times that called out, "Stick 'em up, Johnny, we have you surrounded." It was 10:30; Dillinger had seen the whole show.

I had to close the signal to close in then because I had seen the weapon at his right hip and I saw it in a furtive sort of way as if to warn him that all was not well.

I had seen him reach for his right pocket and give it a slight jerk as if in an effort to draw a gun from it. I called out to him and drew his .38 automatic pistol, but he never fired it. He dropped to the ground; he had been shot.

He had made a long stride toward the entrance to an alley at the left side of which some sort of arch stood. I am glad he didn't get into the alley as there might have been a grade of fire from the rear. I planned to avoid this as in all cases.

Dillinger fell with his head in the alley and his feet on the side walk. In his right hand was his gun and as he fell the yellow hill first causing a sort of a bounce. When his hand bounced up I took the gun from it. Turning him over I immediately determined that he had no other weapons. We spoke to him, but he couldn't speak. An ambulance was called.

Probably I shall never forget, although I should like to, the quietness displayed by the people who gathered around after the shooting. Craning necks of curious persons, women dipping handkerchiefs in Dillinger's blood. Neighborhood business boomed temporarily. The spot where Dillinger fell became the mecca of the morbidly curious.

Carried 2 Guns

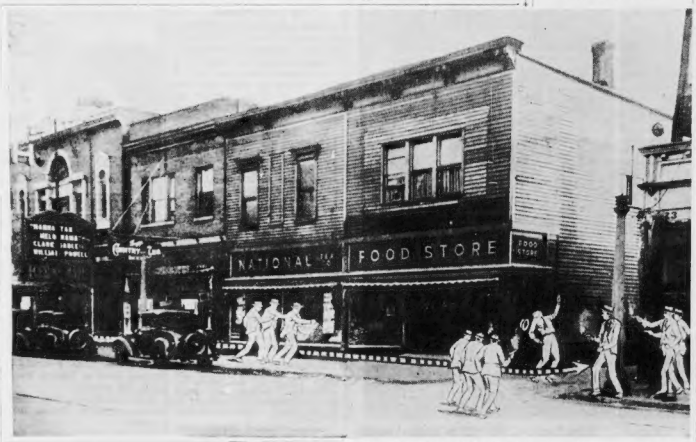
On that night I wore a single-breasted blue coat, white trousers and a white hat, and it was difficult for one engaged on such a mission. I mention this because of my memory of the part instinct played.

I had one gun stuck between my trousers and shirt on the left side and another gun in the same place on the right. Later after leaving this scene I tried to button up the coat and found both buttons gone. Apparently I had grabbed for my gun without thinking, and I am frank to say that I do not know how it came into my hand.

My clothes played another part in this grim drama and a rather discouraging one when we consider the morbid desires of some so-called civilized human beings. While standing close to Dillinger's body as he fell, a bit of his blood came onto the cuff of my trousers.

A day or so later my secretary told me there was a man in my office who wished to see me for the purpose of purchasing that pair of trousers for the sum of $50. He had heard from a bystander that Dillinger's blood was on the cuff of it and he wanted it as a souvenir.



Biograph Theater, Chicago, which John Dillinger attended on night he was killed at mouth of alley, and diagram story depicting shooting of Public Enemy No. 1.

JOHN DILLINGER

Needless to say, he received neither the trousers nor a courteous response.

Dillinger had been shot. It is difficult to describe my feeling at the time.

Primarily, our viewpoint is a sane one because practically all captured criminals talk and in so doing help solve not let us.

In drawing his gun he displayed very definite intention of shooting it out, and it happened he didn't shoot quickly enough to take the lives of any more of our men.

A surging crowd filled the street near the scene; traffic became marked; police arrived. They were informed by the traffic moving, and groups of special agents were formed around the body of Dillinger. A woman screamed, I am shot."

A special agent was dispatched to determine her injury. Another woman screamed. She also had been shot. Both were taken to the hospital immediately.

We were pleased to discover later that neither of these women had been seriously injured. They had been hit by spent bullets.

The bullets had lodged in the fleshy part of their bodies which indicated that the speed of the bullets had been retarded by something before hitting them. The most correct theory seemed to be that these bullets had gone through the body of Dillinger, striking those women by accident. They later recovered entirely.

An ambulance arrived. Five special agents were sent with the body to a hospital, but Dillinger had died on the way there and the hospital refused to receive his body. He was then taken to the County Morgue.

His face disclosed plainly that an operation had been performed in an attempt to disguise him and that a vain effort had also been made to obliterate or affect his fingerprints beyond identification.

Late investigation disclosed that Dr. Wilhelm Loeser, Dr. Harold B. Cassidy and James Probasco, had participated in the facesifting operation which proved to be something of a history-maker in crime. For a good consideration Probasco agreed to allow the use of his house for the operation and the convalescing period.

Dr. Loeser had previously served time in Leavenworth Penitentiary on the charge of illegal activities in connection with narcotics he was to perform the operation. Dr. Cassidy was to be his assistant and administer the anesthetic. The operation took place on May 29, 1934.

With semi-scientific apparatus the operation began. During the operation Dr. Loeser discovered that Dillinger had swallowed his tongue and had passed out completely, his heart had stopped beating.

Great excitement followed—a fee not a life was at stake. Dr. Loeser applied artificial respiration methods. Dillinger had died on the operating table by the means of artificial respiration and powerful heart stimulants he was brought back to life.

These operations cost Dillinger $5,000, but they did little good because his face could be easily recognized by anyone who had studied his photographs, and his fingerprints when compared with those we previously had in our possession could be identified.

Dillinger Fooled

After the operation Dillinger appeared to entertain some doubt as to the efficacy of it and exhibited a threatening attitude toward Dr. Loeser.

The convincing arguments advanced by Piquett's assistant, the philosophical Art O'Leary served to reassure Dillinger; to such an extent, in fact, that Dillinger joined him later in convincing Dr. Loeser Meter that he was should have a similar operation performed. He did, on June 3, 1934.

We knew almost from the beginning of Piquett's interest in Dillinger, and we had him covered as well as any man could be covered. He was trailed a great deal and when the trail was lost it was picked up again.

Worship when it became evident that he was about to leave town he was taken into custody by special agents and was later tried on a charge of harboring Dillinger. He was found by this jury, but we didn't cease our efforts to put Piquett in prison.

We charged him with harboring Homer Van Meter and this time he was convicted. He appealed and appealed and finally he was sent to Leavenworth to serve two years on this charge and to pay a fine of ten thousand dollars.

Louis Piquett is not the only lawyer-criminal with whom we came in contact. He is not the only one who has aided criminals, not only in giving them legal advice after they have been caught, not only in defending them at their trials, but many of them have even gone so far as to aid the criminals in planning their robberies, kidnapings and other crimes.

His three physicians said they believed he was out of danger.

FASHION SHOW TO DISPLAY SKI ATTIRE

It's comparatively simple to learn to ski these days; the difficult part is to dress for it.

How difficult will be shown at the Fashion Congress style show in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel on Wednesday, when a colorful collection of costumes designed for winter sports enthusiasts will hold the local fashion spotlight.

Snow will be the only thing missing in the decorative French Room when four attractive society mannequins parade in Dalmatian ski costumes (with navy plus fours).

Boston will also get its first peek at the new after-ski lounge suits which have set the fashion world agog.

HOT TODDY PARTIES

Since one of the nicest things about skiing these days are the "Hot Toddy" parties immediately afterward, stylists have brought forth glamorous lounging affairs to make one forget the cold and wind on the icy slopes outdoors.

These lounge suits—to which you change from ski togs to do honor to hot rum drinks—are lightweight flannel dresses, instep length and pencil slim. Some have jaunty little boleros and come in both white wool and vivid flame colors.

For those who take their skiing seriously as they leap from Alp to Alp, there will be the new windbreaker suits made of a fabric light as balloon cloth, but improved so that it defies both wind and water.

They are very professional and were created for those who really hit the high trails. Up-to-the-minute skiers also wear skull caps of goat skin and metal goggles with slits instead of lenses.

DALMATIAN, TOO

Not content with its invasion of the dining-room, Dalmatia even lends her fashions to the ski world.

For instance, there are Dalmatian costumes for active sportswear with navy plus fours stuffed into boots and sleeveless embroidered jackets worn over polka dotted sweaters—the bright peasant embroidery on the jacket furnishing the right color interest.

Mrs. Frederick G. Crocker, the former Mary Jane Bigelow, and a sports enthusiast herself, heads this week's style committee.

MUNI In Radio DRAMA

PASTEUR ROLE ON AIR

By N. E. T.

One of the really and all the way around great roles on the Hollywood records is the "Life of Louis Pasteur," so turned in not too long ago by Paul Muni.

It will be with interest aplenty, therefore, that his fan following will wish to lend a good many thousands of ears when he mates to the microphone for a re-enactment of the characterization for the weekly "Radio Theater" hour highlight (WEEI) this evening.

Once more interesting angle and it's a last minute item of information, too, that announcement that Fritz Lieber, prominent Shakespearean stage actor, has been added to the cast that will support the starring efforts of Muni. Cecil B. De Mille, the radio-casting film director, promises a new the vivid screen portrayal of Muni is no more impressive than his radio re-enactment, and on that score Mr. De Mille is surely saying a lot.

FAVORS FLORIDA

New Orleans, that's where swing was born—and Connie Boswell, too, that husky-voiced blues singer whose style no other vocalist has yet been able to duplicate. Connie is "swinging" for the Southland this week, when she will be heard with Harry Richman and Freddie Rich's orchestra, on their 15-minute transcribed program. "Florida's Welcome" soon to be heard from coast to coast.

A farewell radio party will be tendered Jackie Heller, diminutive network tenor, this evening (WBZ) at 10:15 p. m. These gala affairs now (Thursday), the pint-sized singer sails for England to fulfill stage and radio commitments.

HELPING HIMBER

Kate Smith will make two to her race appearances on the NBC network tonight (WNAC), when she sings as guest star on Richard Himber's program, to be heard at 9:30 p. m. Kate has confined her artistry mostly to the Columbia chain connections.

• • •

In tribute to one of America's oldest festivals, the weekly "Cotton Tented Hour" opens its program (WNAC) this evening at 9 o'clock, with a special arrangement of Hoagy Carmichael's "Thanksgiving," for quartet and orchestra. The half hour trend throughout will also be given over to the suspicion day of gratitude synchronized by the Pilgrim fathers. Much of the radio planning for this week of feasts is to be done Thursday, will have its influence on the full day's fare. There is a great deal of tonic beautiful and inspiring dull dissension in the air, these days, but the deepened significance may be accorded to the day and appreciated by people of every far flung corner of America.

FAMILY FUNFEST

Then there's the "Fibber McGee and Molly" feature. These jesters will be on hand to help us in the opening the Thanksgiving holiday during their broadcast (WNAC) tonight, at 8. Marian will sing a few numbers and open the musical portion of it all with the appropriate "Thanksgiving" Mary Chase will sing "Home." Poetic tribute will be paid in the national Thanksgiving blog when its creator, Edward Everett Hale, reads "The Man of Turkey in the Straw." The concluding number will be "When Did You Leave Heaven?"

Ballet Star, Superb Actor Top Coming Bills

Walter Huston as he appears in "Othello," the Max Gordon production which will come to the Boston Opera House next Monday night. The Shakespearean play's stay at the Opera House will be for one week.

Irina Baronova, who will be featured on the opening bill of the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe at the Boston Opera House tomorrow night in the romantic ballet, "Spectre de la Rose." Paul Petroff also performs in this number.

George Arliss In Another Success

By PEGGY DOYLE

In the royal raiment of the Rajah of Rungay, George Arliss stalks sinuously across the Keith Memorial screen and his performance is so characteristically fine that it gives vitality to what otherwise might be too much political and social intrigue in "East Meets West."

This Gaumont-British production, which will remain until the RKO-Radio film version of the notable stage success, "Winterset," opens Wednesday night, presents Arliss at his most suave and subtly menacing.

A British diplomat is negotiating with the powerful rajah for a seaport treaty which an Eastern power is also trying to secure.

At a diplomatic reception given by the distinguished Englishman for the rajah, guests include Nezim, the rajah's Oxford-bred son; Carita, the cunning adviser, and Marguerite, the latter's beautiful wife.

Marguerite, unhappily married, falls deeply in love with Nezim. The rajah objects, takes his son on a tour of his city several days later and they come upon a drunken brawl in a jungle clearing.

Realizing that the natives are receiving smuggled liquor, the rajah orders an immediate investigation. Subsequently Marguerite's husband is discovered to be the leader of the liquor-smuggling gang.

Janie Mannheim, German-Jewish actress, is Marguerite, a distinctly charming lady. Ballard Berkeley as Nezim, the rajah's son, Godfrey Tearle, as Sir Henry Mallory, and Romney Brent, as Dr. Shagir, emissary of the Eastern power, give capable performances.

But it is Arliss' picture and the satanic craftiness he injects into his Rajah of Rungay gives the role that note of authority cruel his fans have come to expect.

Amateur Drama Producer Dies

Hartley Alley, 59, of 20 Pleasant View avenue, Lynn, a steamfitter, dropped dead on Eastern avenue, Lynn, this morning.

Death was due to a heart attack. Medical Examiner Nathan Breed reported.

Alley was well known in Lynn as a musician and as a producer of amateur theatricals. He is survived by his widow, Lillian, and three children.

Ballet Russe Brings New Numbers

By RUTH MARSTERS

Colonel de Basil's Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, which opens its five-day engagement at the Boston Opera House tomorrow evening, will present here a repertoire of fifteen productions, five of which are new to Boston audiences.

The program for opening night consists of "Cimarosiana," "Choreartium," "Spectre de la Rose" and "Le Beau Danube."

In "Choreartium," Massine's choreographic interpretation of Brahms' Fourth Symphony, Tamara Toumanova, Tamara Grigorieva, Nina Verchinina, Riabouchinska, Shabelevsky, Peretroff and David Lichine will dance the leading roles.

EIGHT PARTS

In "Cimarosiana," a ballet divertissement in eight parts, Tamara Grigorieva, Anna Adrianova, Tamara Toumanova, Lubov Rostova, Alexandra Danilova, Shabelevsky, Jasinsky and Petroff will participate.

"Spectre de la Rose," a romantic ballet set to the music of Weber's "Invitation to the Dance," will be danced by Irina Baronova, who takes the part of the young girl, and Peretroff in the role of the Spirit of the Rose.

Alexandra Danilova will appear as the principal dancer in "Le Beau Danube," the role which she has made famous. Riabouchinska appears as the daughter, Leonide Massine as the Hussar.

HOLIDAY MATINEE

Efrem Kurtz will conduct "Chorsatium" and "Spectre de la Rose," Anna Dorati conducting "Cimarosiana" and "Le Beau Danube."

Wednesday afternoon the same program will be presented with the omission of "Spectre de la Rose."

Wednesday evening's program pairs "Concurrence," a ballet by Andre Derain, "Scheherazade," a choreographic drama, to Rimsky-Korsakov's music, and "The Afternoon of a Faun."

At the Friday matinee on Thanksgiving Day, "Les Sylphides," "Boutique Fantasque" and "Prince Igor" will be presented.

NEW NUMBER

David Lichine's new ballet "Le Pavillon" set to the music of Bernard, Mozart and Weber, will have its first Boston performance on Thursday evening with Baronova, Riabouchinska and Lichine in the principal roles.

"Symphonie Fantastique," Leonide Massine's latest work, will be introduced to Boston on Thursday evening with Krasina and Tamara Toumanova in the leading roles.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

TREASURE HUNTS ARE INTRIGUING ENOUGH to inveterate lovers of romance when the normal order of man-seeks-treasure is the basis of the story . . . When the order is reversed, and the story becomes treasure-seeks-man, the interest mounts . . . In the course of making the Thursday rounds, this column stumbled across a note concerning a fortune of $700,000 awaiting its legal claimant . . . It was a vague little item, telling about an Ohio lawyer who was eager to find a Boston "promoter" named Seymour . . . The last trace of the missing Mr. Seymour dated back to 1925 . . . Friday night, a Back Bay woman informed this department that her lamented husband's name was Seymour, that he had died in 1935, that he was a "promoter," and that his promoting tracks stretched obliquely across Ohio to the oil fields of Arkansas, thence northwest to Wisconsin, and back again to Boston . . . A note in Saturday's column that the lawyer from Ohio could learn the woman's identity by getting in touch with this corner resulted in another telephone call . . . The message was labeled "urgent" and carried a Winchester telephone number . . . At the Winchester number, a prominent Boston attorney imparted the information that he was representing a woman who was seeking to locate her sister, missing many years, who had married a man named Seymour . . .

GEORGE HOLLAND

His client, this lawyer said, had no interest in the case other than establishing mortal relations with her beloved sister . . . But in attempting to trace the missing Seymour, the lawyer from Ohio in some roundabout fashion had interviewed the Boston lawyer's client . . . Out of all this came the initials of the missing Seymour . . .

Late last night, a telephone call came from Mrs. Seymour . . . Her husband is buried in a Brookline cemetery . . . They were married in 1922, and as a wedding present her deceased spouse gave her 80 $1000 bills . . . They went to Denver on their honeymoon, and he traded in a fancy car (model discontinued) for which he had paid $5000 in cash, for a million shares of oil-stock . . .

He carried a wardrobe of clothes on his honeymoon for which he paid $3000 in cash . . . In 1897, the defunct Boston Journal had employed him as Yukon correspondent . . . He carried two revolvers as part of his personal equipment, and was quite a colorful citizen in other ways . . . Incidentally, the Boston Mrs. Seymour was his fifth wife . . . But she and a daughter are the heiresses apparent, the daughter being born of a previous union . . . Meanwhile, this column was assured by the Winchester-Boston attorney than in his many years of practicing law, he had never encountered so fantastic and romantic a story as the one in back of the $700,000 waiting for the right recipient . . .

The punch or "zinger"? The initials of the missing Seymour, communicated to this column by the Winchester-Boston attorney, are identical with those communicated to this column by the Back Bay widow . . . And none of the principals has had any contact whatsoever except through this space. (To be continued—as developments develop.)

Once Over Lightly:

Among the many chuckles afforded "insiders" in Charles Washburn's "Come Into My Parlor," a biography of Chicago's semi-legendary Everleigh Sisters, are the page-long quotations of "The Great Fearlesso," the circus bicycle-rider . . . The author, now a renowned New York press-agent, was "The Great Fearlesso" . . . The book is ready for public release . . . Phil Bernstein, the first newsboy from Boston to enlist in the Great War, will accept congratulations soon. The girl is Mildren Schneiderman of Dorchester . . . "Othello," which comes to the Opera House a week from tonight, has Walter Huston as star, his wife, Nan Sunderland, in an important role, and the star's brother-in-law, Robert Edmond Jones, as stage-designer. Jones once worked in a Boston department store. He rates as the most artistic of the designers.

Ranny Weeks will star at the Brunswick Casino beginning Friday. Ranny will work solo, without a band. Roly Rogers and his excellent orchestra will continue. The arrangement is satisfactory all-around. Weeks and Rogers were classmates at law school, and are friends . . . Lane, Tree and Edwards return tonight to the Brown Derby, after completing a Warner Bros. short in New York . . . The Club Mayfair's Christmas Basket Fund party is set for December 6 . . .

Human Interest:

When the Theatre Guild's ill-advised fling at stage-propaganda, "Parade," played in Boston some time ago, critical salvos went to Jimmy Savo and a team of dancers, Fox and Walters. The team worked also in "Jubilee," and seemed headed for the heights. This reviewer, among others, considered the girl, Dorothy Fox, the outstanding member of the duo. Producers seemed to think so, too, for it was she who was given solos. Now, Charles Walters has been engaged to replace Gil Lamb in "The Show Is On," and Miss Fox is dancing with a new partner far away from Broadway and what it means. She is at Levaggi's. Yet there was no quarrel between the partners. One of those sweet mysteries of stage-life.

Chatter:

George M. Cohan is ready to emerge from his coop overlooking Central Park. His new play is finished, and the "casting" sign should be on display soon . . . The Haverhill Chamber of Commerce joins the stage-producing ranks Friday with "The Night of January 16th." Former Mayor Forrest V. Smith is in the cast, and the play will be given Saturday also at the Haverhill high school . . . The Hotel Copley Square Grill, with a string band, is attracting slews of clients . . . Saturday night in the night spots was the slackest Saturday of the fall. The expected late rush when the football specials from New Haven arrived failed to develop . . . Answers: To Paul Cohen: The oversigned never worked in the linoleum department of a Boston department store. Or was the query a hint? To A. G.: The address you ask about is the correct address. To the Wellesley Viper: Sign your name, varlet!

Eugenie Leontovich In 'Mademoiselle'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service.)

Los Angeles, Nov. 23—"Mademoiselle," bought for Marie Dressler when the success of the Jacques Duval stage play was at its height, will finally be produced and more than likely with Eugenie Leontovich in the lead. Leontovich, fresh from her triumph in "Tovarich" (London) has requested that she be permitted to rest before taking a test for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. But it's ten to one that once she faces a camera the role is hers.

"Mademoiselle," played by Grace George and Alice Brady on the stage, was very popular in this country and it was equally popular in Paris where I saw it opening night. Marie Dressler never felt the character of Mademoiselle suited her and I remember she told me when it was purchased that she thought a younger woman should do the role. We think Leontovich would be grand, and so does her husband, Gregory Ratoff.

* * *

Bette Davis has not yet appeared at Warner Brothers studio, but it is assumed that she will check in the early part of this week. When she does, "Marked Women," a melodrama based on the Lucky Luciano vice case which recently occupied the headlines, will be discussed with her. Humphrey Bogart gets his first romantic lead opposite Bette, and this picture in all likelihood will precede "The Changelling," set for Bette before her British escapade.

* * *

Leslie Howard has absolutely put his foot down and said "No" to a movie career for his daughter, 12-year-old Leslie Ruth Howard and this cancels all those exciting plans Paramount had for starring her in "National Velvet." Katharine Hepburn and Margaret Sullavan have been previously rumored as candidates for the role of Velvet, but don't be surprised if Dolly Haas, the British star, is the dark horse in the race. According to everyone who has seen her in the English version of "Broken Blossoms," she is a wonderful actress and so very, very beautiful.

Chatter in Hollywood: Romance with a capital R meets Francine Larrimore when she arrives in London next month. She'll be joined there by Colin Methben, wealthy Scottish landowner and war hero. Francine is waiting until after the preview of her first picture, "John Mead's Woman." Then she hurries to London and the chances are that when she returns she'll be wearing an engagement ring.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The MARGOT GRAHAME-FRANCIS LISTER marriage cold again. MARGOT, who has been very patient, will probably seek a divorce; MARY ASTOR and MARCUS GOODRICH dining and chatting; RUTH and EDGAR SELWYN, now separated, together at a night spot and there are those who feel they may never take their troubles to court; FLORENCE RICE spending three days trying to bleach her tanned complexion back to its natural color; LORETTA YOUNG and EDDIE SUTHERLAND driving to Santa Ana for a preview of EDDIE'S picture against the doctor's orders—consequently EDDIE has had a relapse; BINNIE BARNES dining with JOHN KING. Where was DON ALVARADO who heretofore has had an exclusive on her attentions? That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

War's Horror On Screen

"Spain in Revolt," the supernewsreel that is as live as today's headlines, starts its third week at the Park Theater today. Made by two free-lance Italian cameramen, this picture is a graphic, disturbing presentation of the civil war that is rending Spain as you read this.

Howard Bill Headed by Edna Dee

Edna Dee

The first late-hour frolic is scheduled for Wednesday, Thanksgiving Eve, and the second be the regular Friday midnight show.

With Miss Dee are the popular comic, Charles "Red" Marshall, Dolores Dawn, Madeleine McKenzie, Happy Hyatt, Tom Bundy, Murray Leonard, Nina Mario and several Harlem favorites, including the Washboard Four and Rufus, of the "Blackbirds."

Legion Festival

The annual Thanksgiving turkey festival sponsored by the Francis G. Kane Post, No. 60, American Legion, will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the post headquarters, Parish street, Dorchester.

WOMEN IN LOVE Black, Chic Partnership, Stressed at Congress

By Mae Christie

CHAPTER 38

Would he ask her to marry him? Of course, if he really loved her, he would.

"Are you happy, Ann?"

There was a strain of the old-fashioned in Paul Bradley. Ann had seen it. He would want to meet her parents, visit her home, do things conventionally. He was no Freddie Brandon, no Captain de Freyn.

He would want to claim her proudly, before everybody. It would all be above-board, and clear sailing. She trusted him.

But they could not ride forever in Central Park. Dawn started to streak the sky towards the East river.

Happiness

On the doorstep of the brownstone house which was her home, he gave her a quick handclasp. The taxi waited.

"You've been so sweet to me tonight, my dear. I shall never forget it."

"You don't know how I've appreciated everything. It has been a happy evening!" he asked her. Happy?

What an inadequate word to describe an emotion—a whole gamut of emotions—that were like sunlit waves of the ocean, wafting her to the Isles of the Blest!

Why, she had never lived until this glorious evening! She'd been like a poor little chrysalis imprisoned—not realizing the wonder and the glory waiting for her —with Paul Bradley.

"And one of these evenings, we'll have to do it again."

It confused her, dashed her. She longed to hear him say: "Tomorrow I'll telephone you. Maybe we could go to church together?"—or—"Maybe we could take a long walk in the park?" The almond blossoms were just breaking into bloom up by the bridle-path where Ann had used to ride on horseback, Sunday mornings. Would it be unconscionably bold to ask him? Dare she?

But she was sensitive.

"We'll have to do it again one evening," he repeated, and looked up at the windows of the house though to remind her of the lateness of their return.

She was ashamed of the longing that caught her to be in his arms, just for a farewell moment, feel his warm kiss on her mouth, hear him ask her for a definite appointment.

None of these things happened. With a second handclasp—quick, conventional—he bade her goodnight, walked down the steps to the waiting taxicab.

Not Selling

Ann was the first of her staff to arrive at her department on Wednesday morning. She was to have a window display.

That meant Ramzees, the clever dresser, putting his best foot forward, and Ann wanted to be in on it, seeing that everything was perfect, before the great shade on the window was rolled up.

But a tiny frown puckered her brow as her gaze lit on the consignment of underwear that was not selling. Would it have to be marked down?

Like a housewife, she had her buying allowance from the merchandise-manager, Paul Bradley. If she could not dispose of the goods, it would be her first humiliation since Symmonds. Yet the manufacturer had assured her of the excellent value of the goods, and he knew a knowledge of silks, had corroborated it. Besides, whatever his failings, Tim O'Hallahan was honest in his business dealings.

What about popping up her salesgirls by offering them a small commission on this merchandise, since she did not care to make a "markdown"?

Putting it out of her mind for a moment, she went into the Negligee Salon.

Someone was there. A man, among the boudoir rebels, the charming lounging pajamas and frail undies—looking huge and rather helpless in this hot-house of femininity with its gilded chairs and sofas, its pink velvet carpet, its window draped with blue and rose and golden tassels, in the Du Barry style.

Bradley Serious

He had come here for a quick, violent purpose, to buy presents of the dainty garments all about them gave an added touch of femininity. Surely this room, perfumed, wasn't it an ideal setting for a kiss . . .

But there was no smile on the lips of the merchandise-manager. His mouth looked tense as, for a moment, he stared at her silently. Was he thinking of her, too, in the early hours of Sunday morning? Already, in sane and sober mood, was he regarding it as an indiscretion?

What did she really know about him? Perhaps after a party he was his habit to make love to pretty girls? They'd all drunk plenty of champagne at El Rocco. Perhaps he only regarded the aftermath as an incident! Had she cheapened herself? She couldn't bear it if he thought so.

She said aloud: "I had to go home on an urgent family matter. Sudden illness." She hated fibbing, but never must Paul brewing for herself, her family must be protected, cost what it might.

"Did you know," asked Paul, "that our competitors are offering, at a much lower price, the identical line of lingerie that you purchased through O'Hallahan? That it's selling hand over fist, while you're stuck with your consignment?"

"I knew that special line hasn't been doing well in my department this past ten days, but the reason was beyond me," replied Ann. "The silk's worth the money—the lace and embroideries likewise—and the cut's excellent. It's news to me that a rival store has it at reduced prices. Perhaps a sale?"

"No."

"Then why—?" She broke off. Why was he staring at her so, with accusation in his eyes?

"You've been favoring O'Hallahan to the exclusion of other textile manufacturers. That's bad policy. It lays one open to criticism."

"I'm terribly sorry. I bought from him because I considered I got the best value for the store."

"And now you're stuck with goods you can't get rid of. Mr. Weiss is very much upset about it, especially as we've given such space to this line in the advertising—fruitless layouts and all."

"What can I do?" asked Ann helplessly. "Shall I offer the salesgirls a commission? Take a markdown? Or what?"

Destruction Of Entries

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Even when a player has a lot of winning cards in his hand, he is helpless unless he also holds a card (called an entry) which will enable him to lead.

A great part of technique in the play of the cards consists in preserving the entries held by your side and destroying those held by the opponents.

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 N T | Pass | 2 N T | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

North's raise to three notrump is an illustration of the standard requirement for the opening bid of one notrump in the Culbertson System. With a long suit and two honor-tricks, North can be quite sure that his hand will be of great value to his partner. Even his partner is sure to hold about four honor-tricks, the combined hands will total about six and the presence of a long suit makes game reasonably sure.

West opened the Jack of spades. Fact covered with the King and South won with the Ace. Declarer could count two spade tricks, at least four diamond tricks and two clubs. It was apparent that sooner or later he would have to establish a heart trick. If the diamond finesse should lose, South's remaining spade stopper would be knocked out, and if West were then in a position to win a trick with his Ace of hearts he could run the spades.

South decided to destroy the Ace of hearts as an entry by the simple expedient of knocking it out before the spade suit was established. Accordingly, he led the King of hearts at the second trick. West won and returned the spades. South ducked and took the next round of spades.

When East finally won with the King of diamonds, he had no spade to lead to his partner, and once the Ace of hearts had already been knocked out, he could get clear. West the lead in any other way. Declarer then made ten tricks.

YOU CAN'T go wrong on black, this season. And though you couldn't live without color in your wardrobe, you will still find that you can have your cake and eat it, too, if you go in for the admirable basic blacks. The Fashion Congress shows you how to do it with these selections.

Left, a new black crepe afternoon frock with more fashion points than you could shake a yardstick at. Miss Evelyn Hassman models. Fine black crepe, it starts off with a redingote effect that flares open to show a national blue (lighter and brighter than royal) half-skirt, also of fine crepe. And tick off on your fingers the black and blue tie-belt, the gathered bodice with a very low V-neck, and short sleeves with just the right amount of becoming puff! When you wear it under a Persian lamb coat, it is just about perfect, and the high felt hat binds the partnership with its band of Persian. Frock is around sixteen dollars!

You need not be mannequin-tall these days to look slender and svelte in furs. For the sleek line, invest in fine black caracul (and the price doesn't have to be too fine, either!) Notice what cunningly calculated design for sophisticated chic is in this Fashion Congress selection, right. Slightly fitted, with an unusual high collar, and the two flared side panels that give you the long-limbed look. The conical fur hat accomplishes its build-up effectively. Miss Leslie Blake models.

POINTS TO LOOK FOR IN CHOOSING TURKEY

Be Sure Breastbone Is Flexible

FROM MARTHA LEE'S MONDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

SURELY turkey will be your choice for Thanksgiving. In selecting it, is well to know that broad, full breasts, thin layers of fat discernible underneath the skin over the back, hips, and breast, and clean unbroken skin indicate the highest grade.

The skin and the flesh underneath should suggest a creamy whiteness. Fine-grained muscle is also indicative of quality, but this is difficult to judge in the bird unless a half turkey or turkey parts are purchased.

For roasting, a young bird should be selected. The breastbone will be flexible at the end, the feet soft and pliable and the skin and the feet smooth and bright. Either a hen or tom turkey is good. The hen has a wider, deeper breast. Whether or not there is a difference in meat quality is a debated question.

For size, three-fourths to one pound of turkey loses about 25 per cent of its live weight when completely dressed and drawn.

CLEANING

All cleaning on the outside of the bird should be done before the bird is drawn if the bird is drawn at home. Otherwise care must be used so as not to allow water and other materials used in cleaning the skin to contact the inside flesh.

If wing tip feathers have been left on, immerse the tip in boiling water for a few minutes before pulling out, preferably with pliers. Pinfeathers are removed easily with a strawberry huller or a pair of tweezers. Wash outside skin thoroughly. A soft brush facilitates the job.

Dry cornmeal or salt makes a good skin abrasive. Soap or soda may be used, but care should be taken to rinse the bird thoroughly after using either. The oil sac at the back must be cut away. Kidneys and lung tissue embedded on either side of the backbone may or may not be removed. It is relished by some people.

While not necessary, it is sometimes good planning to prepare the bird for the oven one or two days in advance of use.

STUFFING

Fill the small cavity at the neck and fold skin back over the back, and hold it in place with a steel pin (black headed, about 1½ to 2 inches long, purchased in notions department). The pin is more satisfactory than a toothpick or an "aluminum pin." Fold wings back so that wing tips help to hold the neck skin in place. Fill body from lower end.

Place filling in lightly so that room is left for its expansion. Fasten this opening with steel pins by placing them across the opening at regular intervals. With cord bring the skin edges together by lacing around the pins. This is the simplest method, and the removal after cooking is simpler than with any other method. If desired, the inside cavity may be rubbed with salt (about 1½ teaspoons before stuffing.

A SPECIAL DRESSING

Here is an unusual preparation, not difficult to do, yet with such results in flavor and moist quality of the breastmeat that it is well worthy of attention and trial. Loosen the skin from the breast.

Insert a layer of dressing about one-fourth inch thick between the loosened skin and meat over the entire breast. This dressing should be put in before the body cavity is filled.

A 'Deep-Pore' Cleanser

By ARLINE GOULD

IF SOMEONE told you that grandmother had a better chance to be pretty in her younger days than girls of today—what would you think?

Probably, you wouldn't believe it, but just the same it's true. In some respects, at least.

She didn't have movies and swing music to keep her up half the night . . . cities weren't so big and noisy and the air wasn't filled with soot as it is today.

What our complexions need most of all these days is clean air. We have clean milk and pure water—but air—well, that seems something else again.

Is it any wonder that the most common of all complexion ills is the dust-filled pore. It is a real menace to young people particularly because of the overactivity of the sebaceous glands. Oil deposits soon pick up soot and cinders, the walls of pores expand and bacteria walk in and a case of acne is on the way.

A new "deep-pore" cleanser that penetrates deep into the pores and thoroughly purges them of grime, has just arrived in town. It is a liquid cream and the way it goes after dirt is something to marvel at.

It also gives that "kid-glove" smoothness to the skin, which women try so hard to attain, but few seldom achieve. Another nice thing about this preparation is that it can be used with soap and water, too.

Here is the proper way to use it: Apply the lotion liberally over the face and neck. Do not massage . . . but allow it to remain on for a minute or two so that it will penetrate deep into the pores. Remove with a soft cloth.

Then wash the face with your soap and water. Rinse and dry. We'll bet right now that after this treatment you will hardly recognize your face in the mirror. It will be that radiant . . . and clean.

To learn the name of this deep-pore cleanser, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

AUSTEN LAKE, the sports columnist who is on the inside of the real sports news and lets you take a peek—read him every day in the Boston American.

"YOUR FIGURE, MISTER!"

TO EARN LONG LIFE GO TO WORK—ON YOUR WAISTLINE

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

FIFTEEN minutes of exercise a day, sir, will add years to your life and subtract inches from your waistline. Can you touch your fingers to your toes?

Come on—all the way down! Whew! You can't quite make it? Well, persistence will lessen the distance and your waistline.

This once popular heading over exercise is not an accident, but it is a test of suppleness and coordination. If you can't touch the floor, it is a sure sign you are right on exercise.

Most men who feel fairly well are inclined to neglect exercise. Not that they don't believe in exercise—but they never get around to it. You would find time for exercise, however, if you realized its value in health and efficiency. Overeating and lack of sufficient physical activity increase your weight and reduce your stock of energy. Exercise helps to offset the effects of bad habits, and will do more to extend your prime than any other single measure.

In exercise you must follow the rules of the game, and the first rule is to see your doctor. Don't attempt a program of unusual activity without first consulting your doctor.

Regarding the time to exercise—early morning exercise helps the fat man burn adipose tissue, but is not recommended for the high-strung, nervous individual. That type is almost never overweight, and needs relaxing rather than stimulating exercises. You overweights can exercise at any time, just so long as you exercise regularly and get a good workout.

Lose into your exercise program by warming up gradually to avoid sore muscles and stiff joints. Circulation of air is necessary, so open the windows top and bottom but leave the room comfortably warm. After exercise avoid currents of cold air and two copious drinking of water.

What kind of exercise? Certainly not the old-breathing exercises, because oxygen is used only on demand of the muscles. Exercise to stimulate circulation and to strengthen the abdominal and waistline muscles are the ones most needed by the average man.

POSITION: Lying on side, head cushioned on upstretched arm, palm of other hand placed on floor in front of chest for support.

MOVEMENT: Swing the legs in a brisk, scissors-like motion, one leg back and the other leg forward, then the opposite, in as wide an excursion as possible. Keep the toes pointed and the legs stretched. Perform ten times. Rest. Change sides and swing for ten more counts. Rest and repeat for twenty counts, alternating sides as before.

3. The contest is open to any person, resident of New England, except employees of the Boston American theatre and motion picture companies listed in this contest, and their families. It costs nothing to play this game. No Entry Fees. Free Two Suggestions to Get. No Money to Pay.

4. Below each picture must be written or printed the title of the motion picture and the name of three players appearing in it, selected from the list of names printed with each cartoon.

5. In all 72 cartoons will be printed—one each publication day for 12 weeks. Cartoons are to be submitted only in complete groups of 72. Hold them until you have the 72. Then send or bring them to Movie Title & Identity Editor, Boston American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., P. O. Box [illegible], together with your name and address clearly printed on each. A coupon may be in Boston American office each day, or a facsimile may be used. All entries must be received not later than Jan. 27, or postmarked not later than Jan. 27, and it is understood that all entries submitted become the property of the Boston Evening American and will not be returned. Each entry must be accompanied by some appropriate slogan of not more than ten words suitable for publicizing the moving picture industry. For example: "Movies, the Nation's Favorite Recreation" or "Movies, they amuse and educate." Only ONE slogan can be submitted with each complete entry of 72 cartoons. A list of titles on which your slogan may be written will appear with the last cartoon in the set, number 72.

6. Each entry should be sent by first class mail—postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the prize distribution department. Contestants may send in as many sets as they wish, but no contestant shall be entitled to more than one prize and no more than one prize will be awarded a family.

7. All decisions of the judges will be final. No elaborate or complicated solutions will be considered.

8. You need not purchase the Boston American to compete. You may copy or trace the cartoons from the originals in the Boston American and assemble the set of pictures from the copies you have made. Copies of the Boston American may be examined at Boston American offices or public libraries free of charge.

9. The judges will be a committee appointed by the Boston American. Their decision will be final. In the event of a tie by two or more contestants for any position in the list of winners, the prize in that position will be combined and one prize awarded to each, distributed among those tying.

10. The entry of a contestant is an acknowledgment and complete acceptance of all rules governing this test, made only at any time at the discretion of the judges.

The Boston M. & P. Theatres listed here will carry on their screens names and titles of forthcoming productions which will be used in this contest.

TITLE BOUND RETURNS DANNO O'MAHONEY

MR. BOSTON

Danno Returns
Here for Start of Irish Civil War

By JACK CONWAY

DANNO O'MAHONY came marching down the gangplank of the Samaria when it docked at East Boston this morning. He was accompanied by Mrs. O'Mahony.

O'Mahony is in Boston last July for a visit with his father, brothers and sister in the native Ballydehob. During the summer Danno engaged in several matches in Ireland but following the departure of Jack McGrath, his manager, for America he passed up all wrestling activities.

O'Mahony has been so active on the mat during the past two years he felt a rest would do him good. Danno returned to the United States confident he will once more start on his way to the wrestling heights.

"There is no question but what Danno is the best wrestler in the world," said Manager Jack McGrath. "He has the power as well as the wrestling experience to defeat all comers. I am sorry to learn that Yvon Robert will be out of wrestling for two to three months on account of a broken leg. I am anxious to have Danno meet the Frenchman again as I know O'Mahony can beat him."

Danno and McGrath have both been following the American bouts of Steve Casey, Irish heavyweight, with unusual interest. They consider Casey a strong, rugged grappler, but have no fear of him.

"Danno is Ireland's leading wrestler," declared McGrath with the air of a Supreme Court judge handing down a decision. "He can defeat Casey or any other wrestler in the world."

McGrath says that as soon as Danno gets acclimated he will hit the wrestling trails again and that he will take on all comers in his campaign to prove he is the class of the heavyweight grapplers. During his last American tour, which lasted for 18 months, O'Mahony engaged in 150 bouts. He proved himself a wonder athlete.

K. O. KOVERLY DECLARES HIMSELF

I MET George K. O. Koverly before he left Boston for a bout in New York. He had several plasters on his face and forehead as a result of the punches and kicks he received when ganged by some of George Clark's followers at the Garden. Koverly was fortunate to escape without receiving more serious injuries.

"I would like to wrestle Clark again," Koverly told me. "I am too powerful for him and when I catch up with him next time I shall knock him out."

"That big Irishman," asserted Koverly with much indignation, "has fists as large as hams and should be a fighter, but if we ever meet I shall knock him out. Of course I would wrestle him if a promoter can make the match. Koverly would fight the world if necessary."

RANDOM SHOTS AT THE TARGET

I SALUTE Dick Harlow's Harvard football team . . . It gave a grand account of itself against Yale and deserved a better break in the final score . . . And maybe Cleo O'Donnell wasn't elated when his little St. Anselm's eleven held Holy Cross to a scoreless tie . . . Cleo has been looking forward to the Holy Cross game all season . . .

HARLOW Again Tops CLASS

YALE GAME HAILED

By Associated Press

Well, well, if here isn't Professor Dick Harlow back at the head of the football class again . . . It's his second visit this season . . . Harlow's Harvards didn't win, but holding the Yales to a 14-13 score is Saturday's No. 1 gridiron achievement in this book.

Still the idol of the "kids," Danno O'Mahony, former world's heavyweight wrestling champion, found two rooters among the passengers of the Samaria, which docked in Boston. Judy and Molly Grahn of Ford Hook Farm, Doylestown, Pa., are Danno's admirers.

With eyes for the title he once held, Danno O'Mahony arrived from Ireland with his wife, a former Cambridge girl, to take up the trail of rival heavyweight champions. Danno intends to tune his "Irish whip" on any wrestler who will take the risk while the present champion, Yvon Robert, is recovering from a broken leg.

FIGHTS In Five CLASSES

IRELAND TEAM STRONG

By DAVE EGAN

A draw [illegible] pairs [illegible] will be drawn by the appearance of a team from Ireland which will [illegible] in the Garden tonight. It has been called a trip of Irish [illegible] in the United States.

[illegible]

Irish Stars

[illegible]

They will be fighting, not simply for victory in an amateur show, but for a homeland which is as dear as the lakes of Killarney, for all of us whose ancestors have come from there. They may lose, but I am glad to guarantee you that they will be carried off on their shields, for they will lose gloriously.

[illegible]

There is a line-up which would chase Larry Kelley down the street, and over fences, and through gas pipes and sewers. I think it is the strongest representation New England and the United States has ever had in any of these international tournaments.

You will note that Roy Kelley is going to step up into the heavyweight division. He has designs for the great glory of the United States.

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, you can read a lot of character in these adventure yarns. Some of them give you a pretty good idea of what sort of a person the writer is.

Now take, for instance, ALBERT W. LAWTON, JR., of 176 MILL STREET., NEW BEDFORD. Al is the sort of lad who isn't bothered by any foolish timidity. In fact, he's got all the confidence in the world in himself.

He's the sort of lad who goes ahead and does things without worrying about getting them wrong, or getting into trouble over them—the sort of guy, in short, who would take four boxing lessons and then go out and take a poke at Jack Dempsey. And he probably wouldn't do such a bad job of it, either.

It was 1917 and Al was in the Navy. He was at the Naval Torpedo Station at Newport, taking a course in submarine and torpedo work.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1936

Lewis Haney Says

Bulls in Control Of Stock Prices

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Nov. 23—The stock market last week marched up the hill and down again, closing with little change. The composite averages rallied on Saturday to show gains of about half a point. Bonds, however, lost a little further ground.

Relief concerning the President's pre-fishing chat about foreign funds brought a smart rally on Monday and Tuesday. Profit-taking, accompanied by fears of European war and, if possible, "wealth-sharing" schemes in our country, brought a sharp about-face on Wednesday and a lightening of positions on Thursday and Friday.

Nothing particular happened, however, and, since neither exchange rates nor foreign bonds give indication of alarm over the immediate developments abroad, another rally came on Saturday.

As time goes by, it is beginning to look as if those who have heeded the danger signals and have sought side line positions have had their bets "coppered" by foreign buyers and "the public." There has been a large amount of profit-taking in the last few weeks as large buyers have taken to the side lines on lightened positions.

So far, however, the market has been able to take it. The issue has not been definitely decided yet, but time is working for the bulls.

* * *

In the first place, the pressure to do something with idle money is great. In the second place, the public and the foreign buyer absorb the stock, and thus cause fear that positions abandoned may not be available at any lower prices.

In general, the charts show the composite averages still in the rising "path" of the past three months. The reactions are still checked at or above a rising lower limit.

Of course, this is not conclusive. Much the same could have been said down to the middle of last April, shortly before a severe reaction.

Furthermore, there are some warning chart indications. For example, a sort of "double top" has recently been made. The rails have been persistently weak. Volume has failed to follow strength.

On the whole, there seems to be weaker buying power under the leading stocks, some of which are very high in price.

* * *

For the present, however, the probability now seems to be that a further period of irregular movement within a trading zone will be the means of readjusting the situations.

For one thing, activity falls off on weakness, with little important selling coming out. At the same time, such activity as there is comes mostly in the stocks that rise.

A cumulative average of the 20 stocks most active each day shows a gain of over three points last week, and nine of the 12 stocks most active throughout the week made gains.

Business news is mostly favorable, including automobile and steel production, and railway carloadings and bank debits. Commodity prices too, point higher.

Foreign buying has been resumed again, and foreign funds keep coming our way. Last week, 9.8 million dollars in gold were engaged for shipment to this country, and 15.6 million dollars were imported.

The largest accumulation of investment funds is being increased by huge dividend distributions. This added money may not be spent as freely as soldiers' bonus money, but more of it will go into investments.

* * *

Wild congressmen and crack-pot share-the-wealth proposals are going to be disturbing in the not distant future. Some slump in business within three or four months would not be surprising. But barring foreign war, I am inclined to think that eventually the upward trend will be resumed.

PRICE Of Seats LOWER

ATTITUDE CHANGING

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service
Financial Writer

New York, Nov. 23—The tip off on what Wall Street thinks is going to happen to the individual stock traders with membership on the stock exchange is the price of seats.

The last sale was at $107,000. This represents a drop of $28,000 since election. And this is in face of the largest volume of business on the big board in months and general bullishness for stocks over the next 12 to 24 months.

The change has come with the landslide vote received by President Roosevelt. And it is a change in attitude that not only is apparent in brokerage circles, but in the other sections of the financial community.

First—Broker-dealer segregation on the Stock Exchange and its little brother, the Curb Exchange, will come along now, with the exchanges probably co-operating. There is not much else they can do, and maybe by co-operating less rigid restrictions can be obtained.

Second—Member trading on the exchanges will be greatly restricted, with the advantage these operators have long had over the general public greatly lessened. This edge probably never can be entirely eliminated, but it looks like a membership on the exchange purely for speculative purposes is going out the window. Seat values will be governed more in the future by commission business rather than by what can be made on speculation on the side.

* * *

The first step is too important a one to be rushed into by the securities and exchange commission. It should be taken slowly. Also it is to be hoped public hearings will be held on the matter, so that both sides of the questions can be fairly and openly presented to the general investing public.

There is no emergency now, so there is no need for dashing headlong into this.

The moves to place stock exchange and curb members on the same speculative footing as the general public gambling public are in the right direction. There probably will be little shedding of tears by floor traders on the exchanges are restricted.

Technology

Interior Department reports expenditures of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology for the year ended June 30, 1936, were $3,068,123 and receipts were $3,063,281. Massachusetts Agricultural and Mechanical College, Amherst, were $1,601,897 for the year and receipts were $2,116,627.

MARKET Evils Ended BY SEC

SPECULATION MOOD IS ON

By BROADAN WALL

New York, Nov. 23 (US)—One of the few certainties of the stock market is that a wild trading spree has been restrained only by the concerted action of the Securities & Exchange Commission and the Federal Reserve Board.

The latter's influence is felt in margins. The SEC undoubtedly has discouraged a good deal of the old-fashioned market rigging, pools, manipulation and all the evils that went with them.

Removal of restrictions on floor traders, pools, operators and all the numerous other boldfaces of market-makers, would possibly bring ten million shares in the present mood of speculators.

All Optimistic

Everything is geared up to such a boom—except the restraints "artificially" placed on it through margins and trading regulations.

Sentiment is almost universally optimistic and this in itself would contribute toward bigger markets. Market forecasters are also almost universally bullish.

Under this spell, stocks have been pushed upward even though the payments in large part are efforts to avoid heavy taxation.

The administration's caution on the broad features of our securities has been quickly glossed over. The bulls are not impressed by the possibility that heavy selling may ensue from this quarter.

At the present, few people consider it likely that federal spending can be materially curtailed.

The President's pledge to work toward a balanced budget is also ignored. Little apprehension that "bigger and better inflation is yet to come."

Peculiarly, most of the devout bulls agree that, on earnings and yields, many stocks are far too high.

But they are fearful that a new, and the widest, boom of the whole market is yet ahead, and they want to be in for the killing."

Data on Stock Yields

WEIGHTED AVERAGE YIELDS ON 200 COMMON STOCKS BY GROUPS

The data is computed monthly, and consists of the aggregate annual common dividends paid by the 200 companies as of the end of each month, divided by the aggregate market value of all outstanding common shares of stock of these companies as of the same date.

The data prior to 1936 as shown by the chart is the average monthly yield for the year.

It will be noticed that, in general, yields were high in 1932 and have since declined. This was because market valuations of the respective stocks in 1932 were low; consequently, yields which are the ratio of dividends to stock valuations were high.

Wall Street Sidelights

The new proposed Federal Reserve board ruling requiring customers to put up margin at the time a purchase order for stock is placed with brokers met with conflicting interpretations in trading circles recently.

The greatest confusion applied to the status of floor traders in respect to the regulation. A few days ago the securities and exchange commission discussed it was considering compelling floor traders as well as partners of commission houses to trade only for cash. Although nothing was mentioned in the reverve board order to supersede or replace this proposed securities and exchange commission requirement, Wall Street appeared puzzled by the two separate rulings. According to analysts of the reserve board regulations, since floor traders in many instances are in reality customers of brokerage firms, the new order applies to them as well as to the general public.

In-and-Out Trades Subject to Rules

One phase of stock market activity drastically affected by the new margin plan involves in-and-out trading on the same day. This means the purchase and sales of securities within the opening and closing of the market. As interpreted unofficially, the broker is required to compute the net margin requirement on the combined business of a customer at the end of the day. The customer would be compelled to put up the required margin with the broker. At present since the broker does not have to pay for securities purchased for a customer until delivery is made on the second business day following execution of the order, the customer sometimes is permitted a "free ride" during the interim. The apparent intention of the board's amendment to Regulation T is to prevent evasion of margin requirements by the prevailing practice of delayed deliveries of securities.

Separate Margin Record Involved

Although pleased with the proposal to end "free riding" on margin purchases, brokers anticipate additional clerical expense in complying with the new requirements. One effect foreseen was the opening of special cash accounts in addition to the regular margin account of an active customer. This it was contended, would assure brokers that the necessary margin for orders entered during the day would be "on tap" by the end of the day. It was also pointed out that the proposed reserve board changes would make the broker liable for violation of the law if he failed to restore the required margin by the end of the day on which the transaction took place. This responsibility, it was suggested, would make the broker insist on cash with orders or cash or securities in a special account from which withdrawals may be made to supply necessary margin for the new transacting in the trading account.

RECOVERY

Big Increase In Operating Income

New York, Nov. 23 (INS) — Railroad men credited widespread recovery of business for the big increase in net operating income of class I railroads during the first nine months of this year.

The increase was announced today by the National Industrial Conference Board, Inc., in a bulletin which said:

"Net operating income of all Class I railroads in the first nine months of 1936 was 33.4 per cent higher than in the corresponding period of 1935, totaling $434,900,000, as compared with $321,200,000.

"Gross earnings in the first nine months of the year totaled $2,930,000,000, compared with $2,512,000,000 during the same period of last year, representing an increase of 16.7 per cent.

"Operating expenses increased less rapidly than operating income, rising only 12.9 per cent over expenses for the first nine months of last year. As a consequence, the operating ratio declined from 76.34 per cent to 75.87 per cent."

More Advertising For Newspapers

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP)—Advertising Age reported today that retail merchants in 67 major cities placed 9.9 per cent more advertising in the newspapers for the week ended Nov. 14 than in the corresponding week of 1935.

The increase, the publication said "is an important reflection of better retail sales conditions, and indicates a larger holiday trade this year than for any of the past half dozen years."

The total for the reported week was 21,235,520 lines, compared with 15,422,041 in the corresponding week last year. For the year to date, the total of 795,050,221 lines was an increase of 6.4 per cent over the same period last year, the publication said.

25 Years Ago

New York, Nov. 23 (INS)—Hetty Green, 77, said work had kept her "spry and spunky."

St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad year's net set record of $13,858,827.

ISSUES Become MIXED

IN THE ELECTIONS

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, Nov. 23—Curiously enough, the most pertinent test of public sentiment toward business in the recent election has been widely overlooked.

In voting for men, issues are obscured, and after a contest none can be sure which motives animated the electorate.

In California, however, there was a referendum on a strictly business subject, and organized business won the fight. The voters turned thumbs down on an attempt to impose a punitive and destructive tax on chain store systems.

The hostile measure was rejected by the people in fifty-seven out of fifty-eight counties in the state, by a majority of more than 260,000. The only county in which it received a favorable vote was San Francisco, and well-informed observers ascribe that result to local confusion growing out of the shipping strike.

At a time when business is seeking to re-orient itself, the California situation becomes of pivotal national importance.

The chain store vote belies the easy assumption that the people were in revolt against organized business.

It contradicts the ready assumption that the people were concerned with economic theories, and were insistent on change.

I think that the true lesson of the California incident is that when useful business goes before the public and tells a straightforward story concerning its social utility, it will get a respectful and sympathetic hearing. Heretofore, political critics have gained an ear because frequently business men ignored the obligation to inform the public why their activities were helpful to the ordinary run of people.

The California referendum constitutes the most significant reversal to an almost nationwide campaign during the depression against any business in the field of retail distribution. State after state enacted discriminatory legislation against the chains.

In this spirit, the California Legislature passed a chain store tax measure in the early months of 1935, taxing an individual store $1 a year and graduating the annual license so as to assess $500 a year on all stores beyond the ninth under single corporate control. In self-defense, the chain stores enjoined a referendum petition, and the matter was put on the ballot and voted upon on November 3.

Bangor & Aroostook

October EARNINGS Improve

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Bangor & Aroostook, among the first of the eastern rails, as usual, to place its monthly reports in the hands of the press, showed an improving earnings trend in October.

Operating railway revenues for the month are listed as $512,-963. This compares with $512,-737 in October, 1935. Surplus after charges is reported as 73 cents per share compared with 58 cents in 1935.

The northern New England carriers did not start 1936 as auspiciously as 1935, due to traffic dependence on the potato crop. As a result, the 20 months through October do not make a favorable showing when contrasted with the same 1935 period. Only $1.20 per share net is reported for $3.80 a year ago earlier. However, with the trend or earnings apparently reversing the business factor is entirely comparable before the year is out.

The current position of the steel industry is marked by cross-comment regarding the balance between supply and demand. Some observers have indicated that there have been building inventory that sooner or later will result in short-sheeting and that present consumption the industry is feeling of price advances and labor troubles decidedly thin, if a not higher than incoming orders. Others say this is not the case and point to steel shipments as gains as proof of their contention. Frankly we do not know who to believe. Distance and the confusion of experts explains that. But we do know that the market action of the group has been a fairly reliable guide to actual conditions and we suggest it is the best answer.

• • •

Notebook: While Paramount's best friends admit recent stock market action has been pretty rapic, they retain faith in eventuals but have prices gone. The reason is they believe the company is earning at the rate of $4 per year on the common shares. Even so, we think the better part of wisdom is to await the usual and logical technical rest when a stock has after such a sharp move before making new purchases. The most impressive thing about the fine earnings records established this year is not the figures but the trend. It is the confidence that they will be exceeded in 1937 . . . Take U. S. Pipe . . . $4.50 per share is expected in '36 and substantially more in '37.

The stock market is currently undergoing a test of the lows established on the 14th and week that may well indicate the direction of average prices for the next few or more months. Rails and rails, while important parts of the general picture, need not concern us as much as industrials for the present. Should this group slide sharply, and on volume, through the low points noted, we would either sell immediately or resolve to sell on the first rally. That, of course, only applies to those who try to trade the intermediate trend movement with at least a part of their accounts. On the other hand, We favor the first course and a 50 per cent liquid position.

Here and There: In relation to the above the groups worthy of retention have been already noted as utilities, oils and aircrafts . . . Plus those specialties specifically mentioned . . . Despite a rise of a dollar a barrel from the low further increase is expected . . . All of which will be of particular benefit to Newport Electric . . . However, this issue is up more than 100 per cent from the levels at which we first recommended it . . . And on the definite assumption rosin prices would have the rise expected . . . Consequently the bulk of the good news is out and we suggest profits are in order . . . And certainly new purchases might well await a reaction.

Shipping Industry Looks to the Future

THE AMERICAN shipping industry, disrupted by labor troubles that have stirred as much hostility between the workers themselves as between workers and employers, has a clouded future.

The controversy has progressed to the point where it will be difficult to effect any permanent settlement without Federal intervention.

That is progress toward GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP of the shipping industry.

The nation WILL SOON HAVE a government-owned Merchant Marine, because no other can exist under current labor exactions.

WHEN labor takes from an owner all control of his business, all authority over his employes, it is putting him out of business.

That is what present labor exactions are doing to the owners of the shipping industry.

Industry is not lacking in the courage to carry on in the face of the normal hazards that attend a business venture.

But it has neither the courage nor the means to combat conditions that preclude all possibility of profitable operation.

THAT can only mean that private owners cannot keep the Merchant Marine functioning.

The only alternative is government ownership, because the shipping industry MUST CARRY ON.

It is too vital TO THE NATIONAL DEFENSE to be permitted to deteriorate.

The national interest must be served by a competent Merchant Marine. If private owners cannot deliver that essential service, the government must take it over.

The nation at large can perhaps afford to view that prospect calmly, if it is willing to accept the principle that private ownership can be sacrificed without too much loss.

But, what about labor?

Intelligent labor leaders will ponder deeply the question of what their cause WILL LOSE under government ownership, as well as what it will gain.

Weapons available to labor in dealing with private employers will be useless in dealing with the government.

Private industry has no power and no authority to coerce its workers.

But the Federal Government wields powers that labor would never encounter in the field of private employment.

THE shipping industry has gone about as far as it can go under private ownership. The demands of labor, if persisted in, will make it impossible for the industry to go further.

That road leads, not only to Federal intervention which now impends as the only apparent method of bringing about resumption of shipping traffic, but to ACTUAL FEDERAL OWNERSHIP.

Spain Provides Preview of War in Air

GOVERNMENTS far removed from Spain are turning uneasy eyes upon the methodical destruction of Madrid.

For the first time in history a great city is being reduced to ruins by bombs dropped from the air.

The world has little reason to hope it will be the last time.

Horrifying as the Madrid scene is today, it has about the same relation to air raids in the future as exists between the first automobile and the motor car of 1937.

It is a shocking thing to say, but Spain is hardly more than playing at war.

Multiply everything being done in Spain a thousand times and you still have only an approach to what will happen if the major powers of the world really start in for a fight.

Spain is simply giving the world a preview OF WHAT WAR IN THE AIR WILL ULTIMATELY BE.

London once turned out its lights and was comparatively safe from air attack at night, except when the moon, so beautiful to a nation at peace, was the dread agent of destruction.

Contemplate the devastation wrought in Madrid by a handful of bombing planes. And then picture the thousands of faster, better equipped, more competently manned airplanes any one of the big nations is now capable of sending roaring over the capital of an enemy country.

Why not?

WHAT HAVE WE GOT TO STOP IT?

OF ALL the nations in the world, America is in the best position to make itself secure against attack from the air.

Our isolation is still an asset. The oceans that separate us from a quarreling world are still the envy of worried countries that live under the threatening muzzles of the guns of hostile neighbors.

An American Navy strong enough to prevent approach to our shores by floating carriers, nesting thousands of bomb-carrying airplanes, would be comforting, but not conclusively so.

An American defensive AIR FORCE, capable of putting two thousand fighting airplanes in the air to confront every thousand planes an attacking nation might send across intervening oceans, is the thing which will INSURE OUR SECURITY.

WHY do we not have that determining instrument of defense?

THOSE AIRPLANES WOULD BE THE CHEAPEST POSSIBLE INSURANCE AGAINST WAR.

What price would Madrid now be willing to pay to have been able to put two defensive planes in the air for every attacking ship the enemy sent over?

It is too late to save Madrid.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

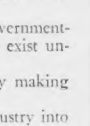
Sobbing, Beatrice Houdini turned off the light above her husband's picture—declared her long vigil ended. For ten years, since the "Great Magician" died, that light had burned, awaiting the answer which Houdini had promised to send back, if communications were possible. But the silence remained unbroken. Exhausted by their frantic beseeching in a final, public broadcast, the mourners turned away. Houdini had not spoken. That, to them, was proof that he no longer existed.



Elsie Robinson

There is nothing new in either such tests or the conclusion. Since human life began, men have challenged death—and proved nothing by their challenges but the own stupidity.

Why should we conclude that the dead no longer exist, merely because they do not answer our calls?

Do we—can we—always answer each other in life? No. There are abysses between our separate living spirits, gulfs of restraint, indifference, misunderstanding or distrust, as impassable as any grave. In life or death, the soul is selfbound.

"Men are spirits clad in veils. "Man by man was never seen; "All our striving somehow fails "To lift that which lies between."

WHIPPED BY FEAR

Actually, we are as barred from e ch other in life as we are in death. Our fi senses give us an illusion of nearness but, when we dare face facts, we know we are not really together . . . cannot really answer each other when we call.

Death rears no darker barrier than life. Yet, because of the illusion of nearness, we manage to forget our real apartness. We do not deny our loved ones' existence simply because we cannot "lift that which lies between."

There is only one way for a strong, sane person to approach death and that is in the same way he approaches life—thoughtfully, courageously. Do not try to run away from death. FACE ITS FACTS. Face, first of all, the supreme fact that life after death is no more mysterious, no more "impossible," than life before death . . . existence WITHOUT a body is no more miraculous or unreasonable than existence WITHIN one.

Who and what are we, any way? What is this Thing which inhabits our body—this Thing we call Consciousness, or Spirit, or Soul? How does it think and feel? Is it a part of the body? The product of the body? Is it in any way vitally dependent upon the body?

HOPE FOR ALL

Could it not exist without a body as well as with one? Could it not function in other forms as well as its present one? For the vegetable and the lower animal there are countless bodies; is it reasonable to suppose that there is only one for the spirit of Man?

No one can answer any of these questions, but the very lack of answer is heartening. For if we cannot prove that human spirit dies with the body, why should we conclude that it dies with the body?

And if love can surmount the barrier of life . . . if we can find each other in life in spite of those binding veils . . . why should we not find each other as surely in death, after this brief loneliness has passed?

I THINK WE WILL!

Dangerous Dove-Cote -:- -:- By Nelson Harding

It holds a withered olive branch,
In a position just about

The bird uneasy sits
In hope the gun will not go off
And blow it into bits.

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, Nov. 23—In the manner of Arnold Bennett's journal: I was noticing the clean pen lines of Dorman Smith's cartoons. I wondered, as he worked many years in Ohio, if he might be influenced by Billy Ireland. Just as Webster, Ding and Briggs were influenced by McCutcheon.

M. resurrected a teenster tintype of us today. Taken in front of a cannon in the public square after a trolley ride.

Shoes date an era. Mine were bulldog toed with big brass eyelets. She was in apering heels. To have made it perfect I should have been carrying a buggy whip.

Loyalty strikes me as one of the supreme virtues. I've often winced at the thoughtless who used to howl for the Stones to wrap their Montgomerys and the Clarks their McCulloughs. Still, when I tried to hammer it into a magazine piece I was stumped after two paragraphs.

One wonders how many others are out of step with the feverishly fast, sophisticated plays now the vogue. Whipping back and forth lightning-clever lines that could be thought up only in an hour or so. Even by a Mixner or Coward. They take away much of the stage's naturalness.

Sophistication surfeits many. I fear. Ahead of me at a Gilbert and Sullivan play the other night was one of those "aunts from way down East." Delightfully simple in dress and old-fashioned coiffure and with a little fan of the '90's. I told my cynical companion I hoped she always remained just like that. He hoped so, too, but added a dubious: "One never knows, she may bust out in a rhumba any day."

Bud Kelland, to my eye, has one of the most interesting faces among the authors. He suggests Evening Shade. One of the lingering, dulcet phrases in my memory is "When evening shadows fall." From an old canto. A favorite selection of the school house elegy quartette. I could sneak over a dirty jot of tenor in the uptake of the word "shadows!" And was just beginning to flourish as a tenor when my voice went all of a sudden and for goodness sakes alive alto.

It troubled me more than I would admit. I had visions of a spot in a minstrel olio quartette —to travel, see the world and, topping all, march in strange towns in a purple satin coat and a white plush plug hat.

It must have perked the true Kansan to see the Long Island fashionables making the sunflower all the go—in table decorations, dress patterns and the small-sized versions in their hair. The sunflower was a boon to the pro-Landon cartoonist, too. How easily he could turn it into a gorgeous sunrise—the old Dawn of a New Era theme and all that. The sunflower was becoming the real forgotten flower until this sudden renaissance.

I'm suspicious of people who show a copy of a literary magazine too much. I suspect a True Confession hidden inside. And those who carry the ever ready cane-like "scale" to the polo matches and golf shoots. Bontons or just commoners putting on the lug?

On a day that the column was arduous, Fred Knowles would pass along an offer of $7000 a week for a ten minute radio talk. Some day one of those radio birds is going to catch me in a true Christian mood, and I'll come up and make him feel pretty squirrely.

M. and I prinked up last evening and got to a dinner a night ahead of schedule. Nothing puts a husband on the spot like such a slip. So I stoned at once. With a spread at her favorite restaurant. And there was a Duchess there in her cups and hiccups. Fun among the upper claws-es, no end!

The 'Nickel Novel'

By Edwin C. Hill

The Human Side of the News

Edwin C. Hill

The "nickel novel" is coming back with a rush. A Cleveland publisher reports that, within the last three years, his sales have jumped from 375,000 a year to 750,000. Other publishers report a similar rising demand, and the interesting thing is that they are mostly the same old blood-and-thunder yarns, with a hard-boiled villain and a saintly hero and the same brand of hair-raising episodes —plus a few modern mechanical trimmings, of course.

It was just 20 years ago that we noted the passing of the nickel-novel era. The movies, it seemed, had put it out of business. Then, again, we were supposed to be entering a period of higher taste, literacy and sophistication, which would imbue the young with a love of instructive and wholesome literature. Now eras seem to have a way of not quite coming off as advertised.

VIRTUE TRIUMPHS

I have hailed many of them, in arts, politics and finance, and somehow the ball passes on the fourth down and I'm still somewhere in midfield; still fighting it out.

So with the youngsters and their yen for a dash of rank, raw melodrama in their reading matter. And so with the oldsters, too. The late Dwight Morrow, and many other distinguished persons one could name, used to read detective and adventure stories until dawn. The news about the comeback of the nickel novel came along with New York's great Book Fair, with multitudes thronging Radio City, fascinated with the exhibits, intent on the lectures and discussions.

It was a stimulating reminder of America's vast and discriminating reading populace, but current $2.50 or $3 books are just straws on the tide of the hayloft reading which engrosses millions of lads and lassies throughout the country. Bringing in the movies and doing away with the hay-loft and the wood box behind the kitchen range didn't make much difference in the long run.

I was looking over one of those nickel novels a few days ago. All our old friends are there, perhaps doing some parachute jumping or driving an automobile, but with little else changed. Virtue still triumphs, industry and thrift are rewarded, and vice and iniquity are punished.

It interested me to learn, a few months ago, that Burt L. Standish, the creator of the Frank Merriwell stories, puts in his autumn years reading Marcel Proust, the foggy, psycho-analytical Frenchman. At 72, he lives happily and peacefully at Camden, Maine, still keeping in touch with young folks, promoting semi-pro baseball and enjoying life generally.

AN OLD MAN NOW

There was a wordsmith for you! No matter how insatiated the new demand for the nickel novel, they'll never get a straight-line, conveyor-belt production output like this. It was 52 years ago when he turned out his first penny thriller. In a period of 17 years, on the Merriwell opus, he turned out a novel a week, with a total of 17,650,000 words. There were no royalties and his earnings ran from $50 to $150 a week, which, of course, was a lot more important money in those days that it would be now.

He was a country boy, near Corinna, Maine. His real name was William Gilbert Patten, but he was known only as Gil Patten.

Sitting down to write a story, he never planned the plot in advance. There was no telling what Frank would do in a given situation. Frank, he discovered, had certain human weaknesses, but he had two unfailing virtues—loyalty and courage.

At his Maine home, tall, graceful, white-haired and urbane, Standish enjoys an old age as pleasant as any of Frank's "happy issue out of all his afflictions." As he sits on the lawn, smoking his pipe, swapping stories with a neighbor, there is, of course, a handsome, bucko lad standing by—unseen by most of us now but once clearly visible to younger eyes, and still as clear as you or me to Burt L. Standish. They have a happy, ageless companionship.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

A special board of Army engineers reports that the expenditure of $157,585,000, exclusive of the costs of lands, "is justified in the public interest to complete the Florida ship canal." "That is vindication of President Roosevelt's judgment in starting the canal for which the last Congress refused to make an appropriation to continue the work. But it doesn't settle the controversy over the desirability of the canal. There are many things this country needs much more than the Florida ship canal. And there are many projects which will produce greater returns. At least some little consideration might be given the fact that the Federal government does not have the money to sink in this canal.

Congressman Cannon of Wisconsin surely does not think anybody is going to take seriously the resolution he says he will offer requesting the President to prohibit participation by our ambassadors and other governmental representatives "in the coronation ceremonies and the marriage ceremony of the King of England." His excuse for advocating an American boycott of the ceremonies in England is that England is a defaulting debtor to the United States and "a debtor has no right to waste huge sums of money for needless display." But nothing we can do is going to stop the "waste" of this money, if its expenditure is waste.

President Roosevelt's warning against the potential danger of large foreign purchases of American securities is echoed in financial circles. The President's statement, while directed at foreign speculation in our market, indicated he is fully awake to the menace of a runaway market and that he realizes speculators are interested merely in profits and not in maintaining prices. More important, he is prepared to do something if he thinks it is necessary to curb the speculative spirit.

A booming stock market undoubtedly is beneficial to the country, both economically and as well as an economic standpoint. But after our experience in 1929 and 1930 we shouldn't want the kind of a boom which encourages everybody to think they can get rich by speculating. Anyone who is tempted to criticize the Administration for interfering with speculation should think back to the 1929 market crash and remember what happened when the speculators were allowed to run wild.

Reports of a German-Japanese alliance are given credence because that is a logical move. Both Germany and Japan have been at outs with Russia for some time. It is only natural that they should enter into an agreement for mutual assistance in the event that either is attacked by Russia.
